OF

The Chapel of the Holy Trinity, Knightsbridge, 1658—1700.

Knightsbridge Chapel, otherwise Holy Trinity, Sloane Street, was the lineal successor of an ancient leper hospital, which in time became a chapel of ease to St. Margaret's, Westminster. Rebuilt in 1609 by Nicholas Birkhead, citizen and goldsmith of London, it was much used apparently at times for secret marriages. The records are contained in two series, of which the more important, as containing notes of special and peculiar interest, exist in thirteen note books; and second, the official registers, which are frequently lacking in whole series of entries, and are rarely in complete accord with the note books. The text has been, for many reasons, chosen from the note books rather than the registers, but the two have been collated and additions from the latter, such as variant spellings, indicated in brackets. The Church was ultimately removed about 1862 to Prince Consort Road. These books are in the custody of the Rev. H. B. Coward, Vicar, who has kindly consented to their publication.

Vol. I., 1658—1663.

Entries made in a paper quarto, roughly bound in a cardboard cover, at some later date.

Monies gathered by the inhabbitants of Knightsbridge for and towards the Reparations of the Chappell Caled Trenite Chappell belonginge to the Hospitale Spittle or Lazer hous of Knightsbridge.

Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica

AND

The British Archivist.

We have had many requests from our Subscribers to print in the form of Supplements with a separate pagination, all those contributions which, owing to their length, must of necessity extend over a long period before completion.

An opportunity has now arisen in the taking over of The British Archivist, which will be amalgamated with this publication in future. That journal, of which twenty-four parts have been issued, has been publishing some very valuable material, all in the form of separate Supplements, and these will be continued in that way.

Unfortunately the size of The British Archivist is larger than Misc. Gen. et Her., therefore until the present Supplements are completed it will be necessary to continue issuing them in the larger size. Owing, however, to the large margins, any one desiring to make the Supplements uniform in size with this publication will be able to do so when binding, as the space taken up by the type is the same in both cases.

As new Supplements are started they will be made uniform with Misc. Gen. et Her. This will also apply to Supplements which extend to more than one volume, as, for instance, the Chancery Depositions, the first volume of which will end at No. 500, when an Index will be printed. It is therefore recommended that in this case, Vol. I. should be reduced in size when binding to make it uniform with any future volumes.

Our Subscribers can obtain from us the twenty-four parts issued by The British Archivist, containing the earlier portion of the Supplements, for £1 10*s.* 0*d.*

A List of Wills registered in the Cause Books of the Bishop of Hereford.

There exist, unfortunately left in the past in a much neglected condition, a fine series of Cause and Instance Books of the Court Christian of the See of Hereford. Some of these chance to contain many registered wills dating from the first quarter of the 15th century to the third quarter of the century following. As these wills are very little known, if at all, it seemed advisable that a list should be printed in this publication.

The Family of Milborne of Somerset and Monmouthshire.[1]

George Milborne and Christian his wife had issue (see ante, 5th Series, Vol. III., pp. 203 and 244)—

I. Lucy Milborne, eldest daughter. Legatee under the will of her niece Lucy Milborne.[2] Legatee under the will of her brother Charles Milborne.[3] Married Rowland Scudamore,[4] esq., of Treworgan in the parish of Llangarron in the county of Hereford.

She was married before the date of her father's will, viz., 30th May 1635,[5] as he therein calls her his daughter Scudamore, and probably had property settled on her at her marriage, as she did not benefit under the will, but her sons and daughters were legatees, though unfortunately their names or number are not given.

Her husband Rowland appears to have died before the 29th Nov. 1650. After his death proceedings were taken touching his lands, as he had been voted a Recusant in Arms, and Charles Milborne, her brother, in his depositions made at the before-mentioned date, gave evidence that Lucy, the widow, had a jointure in part of his lands.[6]

John Milborne, her eldest brother, petitioned under date the 13th July 1653 for the sequestration to be taken off certain messuages and lands of the late Rowland Scudamore, her husband, and which premises formed part of her jointure.

The messuages and lands [will be found described in the account of John Milborne, see later] were granted on lease for a term of years by a deed dated the 30th May 1650, which term was unexpired, and he prayed that as the jointure had been allowed by the Commissioners he might be allowed to enjoy the said premises according to the said lease.[7] This appears to have been granted by the Committee.[8] She had issue—

i. Milborne Scudamore, gent., of Treworgan in the parish of Llangarron in the county of Hereford. Born about 1632. He gave evidence on behalf of Henry Milborne the 9th Sept. 1672.[9] Legatee under the will of Elizabeth Milborne 1689.[10] Legatee under the will of Lucy Milborne.[2] Died sine prole 1691.

[3] Book Laud, 88, ibid.
[4] Rowland Scudamore of Treworgan was the eldest son of George Scudamore, the third son of William Scudamore of Holme Lacy and great-uncle of John Scudamore, the first peer of the family, who was created Earl Dromore in 1628 and Viscount Sligo, which titles became extinct in 1716 on the death of James, the third Viscount, leaving an only daughter and heir Frances, who married first Henry Somerset, third Duke of Beaufort, from whom she was divorced in 1743-4, and married secondly Charles Fitzroy Scudamore of Holme Lacy in the county of Hereford, natural son of the Duke of Grafton, who took the name of Scudamore; their only daughter Frances married 2nd April 1771 to Charles Howard, the eleventh Duke of Norfolk [she was his second wife], on whose death without issue the immense estates belonging to the family became the subject of contention between the representatives of the brothers and sisters of the first Viscount, or persons claiming to be so, as heirs-at-law.

In his will, which bears date the 28th April 1689 and was proved the 10th July 1691,[1] he refers to his father being dead, and appoints John Vaughan, gent., of Ross in the county of Hereford, and Walter Evans, esq., of Langaddock in the county of Monmouth, trustees of certain of his property for the payment of annuities and legacies payable out of his estates, but omits to mention his relationship, if any, viz.: To his goddaughter Mary, daughter of Thomas Chadwick of London, 12*li.* per annum. To Francis wife of John Clifton and to Clare wife of Thomas Goddard 5*li.* per annum each. To Katherine Scudamore 6*li.* per annum. To Christopher Scudamore of Treworgan 5*li.* per annum and to Henry Scudamore, son of James Scudamore, late of Penrose, deceased, 10*li.* per annum. To his uncle Henry Milborne he bequeathed 10*li.* to buy him mourning, and to Francis Baskervile 5*li.*, and appointed George Scudamore his brother sole executor, who proved the will as above.

2. .... Scudamore. The Christian name of this son has not yet been discovered. He is mentioned in the will of Elizabeth Milborne 1689,[7] but not by name, and as his brother John is called the eldest son of Rowland on his monument, the inference is that this was Rowland's second son.

The following is a copy of the inscription on the monument in memory of Sir Samuel Mico, Knt., on the north wall of the vestibule of the Mercers' Chapel, formerly in the Chapel itself, which, with an abstract of his will, may be of interest, as they add several particulars of the family not given in the pedigree in the Visitation of London, 1633-34 (see Harl. Soc., vol. xvii., p. 99) or in Le Neve's Knights (Harl. Soc., vol. viii.). The monument consists of a large panel bearing the inscription within a carved ornamental bordure, and a shield of arms: these appear to have been incorrectly repainted when the monument was moved, viz., or, three moors' heads couped gules; impaling, azure, a mitre or. The arms should be: or, three moors' heads in profile couped below the shoulders sable, banded about the temples argent, tied in a bow at the back of the head; impaling, or, a mitre argent, lined gules, the framework (? sable) bezantée, the pendants sable plattée. (Vide *Visit. Ex'ors, my father M^r John Fell, M^r John Perkins of Lime Street, Grocer, *Joseph Crowcher, Senior, of S^t George, Midx., Gentleman, and they guardians of son Lister, £50 to each. Witnesses: Edw. Green, George Smith, jnr., of Leman S^t, Goodman's Fields, sugar refiner, John Peck.

1751. My brothers Joseph and Lister (under age) £500 each; cousin James Crowcher £25. Witnesses: Joseph Crowcher, Mary Scrimshaw. Proved 25 May 1751 by Robert Fell.

* It would be interesting to know who his father was. Described in his will as "citizen and vintner," Master of the Vintners' Company 1752; portrait signed and dated, "T. Frye, pinxit 1737." Over his vault in St. George's (on the gallery of which his name occurs as Churchwarden in 1729), and where he is buried, the arms he bore are painted with the field gules; the martlet is not a difference but a charge, and is placed on the pale between two crosses paty. In the "Visitation of London, 1633—35," they are attributed to Giles Crouch of Cornhill. The Joseph Crowcher entered at the Merchant Taylors' School is no doubt his son, although the compiler says "probably the son of John citizen and merchant taylor;" the dates exactly correspond.

* It would be interesting to know whence he came and who his wife was. He was a Captain in the East India Navy. He made provision (some say founded an almshouse) for four mariners at Blackwall, now merged in other charities. On his tomb at Poplar in St. Matthias' Churchyard, an old East India Company burial place, is inscribed (now rather illegible) :—

Constant wife of Captain John Fell of S^t^ John, Wapping, Merchant, ob. 13 Feb. 1724, aged 60. Elizabeth, daughter of Captain John Fell of S^t^ John, Wapping, Merchant, and wife of Captain John Robinson, Elder Brother of Trinity House, ob. 8 Dec. 1732, aged 52.

The Family of Milborne of Somerset and Monmouthshire.[1]

George Milborne and Christian his wife had issue (see ante, 5th Series, Vol. III., pp. 203 and 244)—

II. Christian Milborne, second daughter, was named one of the executors of her father, but he revoked the appointment in the codicil. She never married, and with her sister Catherine,[2] who also remained single, resided at Clytha in the county of Monmouth.

She was a legatee under the will of her father George Milborne, esq.[3]

Two-thirds of her estate appears to have been sequestrated for her recusancy,[2] for in a petition dated the 17th Jan. 1654 she prays that as her estate has been sequestrated for her recusancy only, for permission to compound, on the Act of 21 Oct. 1653, for the said two-thirds, and that if there should afterwards be any mitigation of the value prescribed or other advantage, that she might have the benefit thereof. In this petition she describes herself as a spinster and of Winistow (i.e., Wonastow) in the county of Monmouth.[4]

III. Margery Milborne, third daughter. She appears to have married before the date of her father's will, viz., the 30th of May 1635, as he therein calls her his daughter "Madox." It is probable she had a settlement made on her at marriage, as she did not benefit under her father's will, but her sons were legatees; unfortunately they are merely named as "sons," and not by their christian names or the number of them.[3]

She married Thomas Maddocks[5] of Ty Mawr in Llanfrynach, co. Brecon, eldest son of John Maddocks (a member of a very ancient Welsh family). Had issue—

i. John Maddocks (query if Thomas). Legatee under the will of his grandfather George Milborne, esq.[3] Married .... daughter of Charles Herbert .... of Penkelley (? Pencilli) in co. Brecon. Had issue—

(b) Mary Maddocks. Married Edward Vaughan, an officer in the Excise.[5]

[2] Mrs. Christian Milbourn appears in the "Examinations as to Popery, 1680," p. 5, where Thomas Watkins, Vicar of Llanarth, gives evidence that Walter Harris alias Price, a reputed popish priest, resided in the house of Mrs. Christian Milbourn at Clytha, and that there were eighty popish recusants there.

IV. Joane Milborne, fourth daughter. She married James Prichard, esq., of Glantrothy and Campston, co. Monmouth. By his will dated 11 Feb. 1675, 28 Charles II., in which he describes himself as of Kamston, co. Monmouth, esq., in good and perfect mind, desired to be buried in the chancel of Grosmont in the grave of his second wife.

bequeathed the said messuage to Ambrose and James Prichard his grandchildren and to their heirs for ever, to be equally divided between them, etc. And whereas he had one lease of the demise of Thomas Prosser of Trevetka in co. Brecon, gentleman, of all that capital messuage or tenement called Trevetka, with all the house, etc., etc., thereunto belonging, which lease bore date the 1st of May 1665 for the term of 21 years, he gave, devised and bequeathed the said lease and the term of years therein unexpired to his son Rowland Prichard and his heirs and assigns upon trust that he and they shall permit and suffer the said Thomas Prosser, his heirs and assigns, to hold and enjoy the said messuage and premises from the day of his death for and during all the then residue of the said term of 21 years to come and unexpired, upon condition that the said Thomas Prosser should pay all his children 20*li.* each successively one after another when each should attain the age of 21 years, etc., etc. And whereas his son Rowland Prichard was bound to him in a bond of 400*li.* for payment of 200*li.* to such person or persons as he should by his last will and testament devise the same or otherwise, he gave, devised and bequeathed 100*li.* thereof unto Elizabeth the daughter of his said son, and the other 100*li.* to his two sons Ambrose and James Prichard to be equally divided between them. To Thomas Springott, gentleman, and to Mary his wife, his (testator's) daughter, and to James, Jane and Mary Springott, their children, he gave 40*s.* each to buy them mourning. To Elizabeth his daughter, the wife of David Morgan, gentleman, he gave 5*li.*, and to Sarah and Jane Morgan their daughters he gave 10*li.* each, to be paid immediately after his decease. To Alice his daughter, the wife of William Watkins, gentleman, and to all their children he gave 20*s.* each, to be paid shortly after his decease. To Jane Wintle his daughter he gave 40*s.*, and to Thomas "Weale" and Joseph Wintle her children 20*s.*, to be paid within one year after decease. And whereas George Milborne, esquire, late of Wonastow in co. Monmouth, deceased, by his last will bequeathed unto Joane his (testator's) late wife, deceased, by the name of Joane Milborne, his daughter, 800*li.*, and whereas the sum of 90*li.* and part of the said 800*li.* was then unpaid, he gave, devised and bequeathed the same 90*li.* with interest to his son Rowland Prichard and his daughter Rachel Prosser, to be equally divided between them. And whereas Charles Milborne, esq., by his last will and testament bequeathed to the said Joane his wife 20*li.*, and whereas the said 20*li.* were in the hands of Henry Milborne, esq., of Llanrothal, he gave, devised and bequeathed the same 20*li.* to his son and daughter Rowland and Rachel to be equally divided between them. To James and William Watkins his nephews he gave 20*s.* to buy them mourning rings, and to Alexander Saunders his late servant he gave 20*s.* To James the son of Watkin James 20*s.*, and to William the son of Morgan Lewis he gave 10*s.*, all good money, to buy them lambs. And further gave and bequeathed to his brother John Prichard his best hat, best suit of clothes, two bands, two shirts and two pairs of shoes and stockings, and nominated and appointed his son Rowland Prichard his sole executor, to whom he gave and bequeathed all his goods, cattle and chattels unbequeathed.

This will was signed James Prichard in the presence of William Powell, "clr'e signu'," Arnold David, John Arnold and Will. Prichard, and was proved at London 7 May 1678 by Rowland Prichard, son, and the executor named in the will.

George Bonett was buried 12 July 1707 at the parish church of St. Antholin's, Budge Row, London.[1]

By his will,[2] in which he is described as George Bonett, citizen and cutler of London, he gave all his lands, houses and tenements, as well freehold as copyhold in England and Wales and wheresoever to his dear and loving daughter Mrs. Sarah Milborne for the term of her natural life, and after her decease to his grandson George Milborne and his heirs for ever, but if he should die without heirs then to any other heirs of his said daughter Mrs. Sarah Milborne lawfully to be begotten on her body, but should she die without heirs the said property to his son-in-law Mr. Charles Milborne and his heirs for ever. To his sister Mrs. Honoria Mason 20*li.* per annum for her natural life. To his nephew Henry Mason, her son, 10*li.* per annum for his natural life. To his servants Francis Wightwick and John Wastell 10*li.* each, and to every servant living with him at his decease 20*s.* To his mother-in-law Mrs. Sarah Story 20*li.* per annum for her natural life if in case she shall not think fit to live with his daughter Milborne, or which she should think fit to accept, and recommends her to his daughter's care. To his aunt Martha Hairland he bequeathed 4*li.* per annum for life. He further appointed his daughter Sarah Milborne whole and sole executrix, and bequeathed her the rest and residue of his personal estate "in sure confidence" that she would raise 1000*li.* to place his said grandson George Milborne abroad in the world as soon as he should arrive at the age of sixteen years, and also pay all his just debts and legacies. A memo was added to the will giving his niece Mrs. Elizabeth Story a legacy of 100*li.*

The will was dated 31 January 170½, 13 William III., but does not appear to have been signed until 9 Aug. 1702, the signature being witnessed by Fran. Wightwicke, Sam[ll] Story, and Henry Milborne.

By a codicil dated 5 July 1707, he gave his son Milborne full power to sell or dispose of any part of his estate for the payment of his debts; further, he revoked the legacies of 20*li.* per annum to his sister Mason and 10*li.* per annum to his nephew Harry Mason, and also revoked the legacy to his aunt Harland, she being better provided for. He also revoked the legacy of 100*li.* to his cousin Elizabeth Story, and instead, by reason of the debts on his estate, he bequeathed her 50*li.* He also revoked the legacies of 10*li.* each to Mr. Wightwick and Mr. John Westell, and in lieu thereof bequeathed them 5*li.* each. Codicil witnessed by Jos. Nicolson, Sam. Story and Mary Moss.

Davies.

(See ante, p. 21.)

There is a good account of this family in the Herald and Genealogist, vol. vi., pp. 145 and 354. Hugh Audley, third son of John, was called Audley the Rich, a money-lender, whose money came to Alexander Davies, whose daughter Mary (age 7 in 1672) married Sir Thomas Grosvenor, and so took the valuable estates to her husband and hence to the present Duke of Westminster.

Audley Street and Davies Street are called after these people.

Loftie's History of London, vol. ii., p. 102, also has some notes relating to Davies and Audley and their valuable property.

Review.

The Melvill Family. A Roll of Honour of the descendants of Capt. Phillip Melvill, Lieut.-Governor of Pendennis Castle, and their immediate connections by marriage in the years of the World War 1914—1918. By E. J. Joubert de la Ferté (eldest daughter of Philip Sandys Melvill, C.S.I.). (London: Arthur L. Humphreys.)

This Work serves the double purpose of being a History of the Melvill family, from the common ancestor Capt. Philip Melvill (1760—1811) and his wife Elizabeth Carey, youngest daughter of Peter Dobree of Beauregard, Guernsey, and a Roll of Honour of the descendants.

It opens with a short account of Capt. Philip Melvill and his connection with the 73rd Regiment, now the Highland Light Infantry, and his service in India.

Following this narrative, a separate section of the book is devoted to the life of each of the four surviving sons of Philip Melvill, with their descendants, male and female, preceded in each case with a key pedigree in tabular form. The four sons were Sir James Cosmo Melvill, K.C.B., Philip Melvill, Canon Henry Melvill, and Sir Peter M. Melvill, K.C.B.

Particulars are given of what part each member of the various branches of the family had taken in the late War, and an account of where they served. In addition to the Melvills, it also includes the descendants of those families with whom the daughters intermarried. Reference is made to fifty-seven families so descended, who served or helped during the War.

It is illustrated with seven portraits, beautifully reproduced by photogravure.

As a most charming method of commemorating the deeds of those living at the time of the War, it will become, no doubt, a treasured heirloom of future generations, who will bless the foresight of those who compiled this valuable family record.

Early Wills in Private Possession.

St. Swithun's, Worcester.

Some years since I had an opportunity of carefully calendaring the contents of certain chests preserved in the tower, and the greater part of the long series of charters and papers found therein were duly published by the Worcester Historical Society in a volume of Collectanea, in all some 282 items. After that, in a modern iron box in another part of the church, I discovered a further series, which so far has not been printed, among them the following wills, which appear to me of more than usual interest.

Family of Fuller of Bristol.

Communicated by J. F. Fuller, F.S.A., Dublin.

A tradition exists among the members of the above line of Fullers that it is an offshoot of the Bath line, of which I published a pedigree in Fifth Series, Vol. I., pp. 137 to 143. Strong confirmation is to be found in the fact that in the administration of effects of Ann, widow of Joseph Fuller of Bristol, in 1795, one of the guardians of her children and "uncle and next-of-kin" was John King; while in the Bath pedigree the marriage of Samuel Fuller with Ann King is recorded.

They were the guardians of her children George and Ann, then under age, and renounced the guardianship when George came of age (21) in Feb. 1802. This date gives his birth at about 1780. The Family of Milborne of Somerset and Monmouthshire.[1]

John Milborne, esq., of Wonastow, co. Monmouth, eldest son (see ante, 5th Ser., Vol. III., p. 235).

Described in the Letters of Administration to his estate, granted to his daughter Mary Kirwood the 10th of February 1670,[2] as late of Allestey (i.e., Alveston) in co. Gloucester, and described in the will of his daughter Lucy Milborne 1669[3] as late of Wonastow.

Legatee under the will of his father George Milborne 1635, also under codicil to same dated 1637, and proved the same as one of the executors the 24th of July 1639.[4]

Admitted to the Inner Temple, London, the 20th of February 1620,[5] being described in the Admission Book as John Milborne, gentleman, son and heir of George Milborne, esq., of Wonastow in the county of Monmouth.

Vol. ii., pp. 667-8, "Middle Temple Records," edited by Charles Henry Hopwood, K.C., gives the date of his admission as the 15th of November 1621, and describes him as specially bound with William Morgan and Walter Kyrle, gents., the fine only 3*li.* 6*s.* 8*d.* by request of Walter Pye, knt., Attorney of the Court of Wards and Liveries, a Master of the Bench.

He mentions in his will[2] that he had in November 1634 settled his estate, except two farms called "Bailey Pitt" and "Kirton" and some other small things, upon William Milborne, his "then" eldest son, on the condition of receiving 350*li.* per annum for life and the sum of 500*li.* as by a deed of rent charge, his said son also agreeing to release him of certain debts.

In February 1638 he presented Alexander Huish to the rectory of Hornblotton on the death of Thomas Clarke.[6] Margaret, the daughter of this Alexander Huish, appears to have married Thomas Milbourne[7], but I think he was not in any way connected with the Milbornes of Wonastow. He was Sheriff of Monmouth 1639-40.[8] He was appointed one of the Commissioners for assessing a Relief in the county of Monmouth 1640.[9]

The 2nd of October 1640,[10] as Sheriff of the county of Monmouth, he wrote to Lord Cottington, Master of the Court of Wards and Chancellor of the Exchequer, praying to be allowed to vindicate his proceedings in the cause between Katherine and Philip Cecil.

On February the 9th, 1639-40, as Sheriff of Monmouth he wrote to the Council a letter, dated from Wonastow, relating to the 5th article of his instructions as to rating the clergy to the ship money, and states that by virtue of the instructions Bishop Murray of Landaff and himself met to hear the complaint of Henry James, clerk, rector of Machen, who complained that he was rated above the tenth part of the rate imposed on the whole parish, which the Bishop approved as a just cause, but he would not agree and asked for the Lord's instructions thereon.[1]

As Sheriff, in a letter dated from Wonastow the 14th of September 1640 to the Council, he stated that of the 1500*li.* ship money charged on his county he had already paid 400*li.* and now sends 400*li.*, and refers to the trouble he had in collecting it.[2]

Probably he and his residence Wonastow House is referred to in the parliamentary [Roundhead] journal "The County Messenger," October 4, 1644,[3] in the following words:—

> "A garrison of ours . . . . a house belonging to Mr. Milburn . . . . where 40 of our foot soldiers and two small troops, both consisting of but 60 horse, with whom powder and shot being scant a maide of the house brought them a bag full of six pound weight and suplied our men with lead out of the glass windows and molten pewter, with which, together with stones out of the house and scalding water, they kept the enemy off until we came to relieve them. Then we fell upon them, killed many of them, and pursued the rest three miles. I never saw [saith the writer] the sword cut and destroy so many. The Welch rogues burnt two ricks of Mr. Milburn's corn. Our govenor [i.e., Monmouth] gave the maid two pieces for her powder and hath taken her into his service; He also kissed her for the good service she did, and so did all the rest of the commanders."

The probability is that the Milborne family were absent at the time as they were undoubtedly Royalists, and the inference we must draw from the Governor taking the maid into his service is that her longer service in the family was doubtful.

It is probable that he was the John Milborne who was one of the purchasers of the effects of King Charles I., as will be seen by the following extract from the inventory of the goods, plate, pictures, etc.:[4]—

> "Sould May y 24th Mr John Milburne for £100.
> 1650 24th To Jnº Milburne Eliz. Dobson goods for £141 10 0."

He appears to have been one of the Committee for advance for money cases 13 November 1648,[5] viz., John Milburn, ... Morgan, Llansvare, Sir William Morgan,[6] Tredegar, George Powell, Monmouth, John Vaughan, papist, Courtfield—all of Monmouth.

Information appears to have been given that Milburn was in service for the King at Raglan, Chepstow, Monmouth, etc. (See Record, vol. A 21, No. or page 123.)

The 13th of April 1653 he presented a petition to the Commissioners appointed for the sale of Recusant Estates, dated the same day, setting forth that Lucy Scudamore, widow (his sister), relict of Rowland Scudamore, esq., late of Treworgan in the county of Hereford, one of the persons named in the 3rd Act for the sale of Recusant Estates, after the decease of her said husband, by a deed dated the 30th May 1650 for a valuable consideration did demise unto him all that messuage called Treworgan and the lands thereunto belonging, also all the lands purchased of John and Philip Donne and a messuage called Lancronne and land called Glascombe and the gardens and a messuage called Soughnant with their appurtenances in the county of Hereford, late parcel of the estates of the said Rowland Scudamore, for a certain number of years then unexpired, all which premises were legally settled on the said Lucy Scudamore for her jointure, and further that the said jointure having been allowed by the Commissioners he prayed that the sequestration on the said lands should be taken off, and that he should be allowed to enjoy the same according to the said lease.[1]

In the Calendar of Committee for Compounders, etc. (State Papers, Series Domestic, 1643—60, part iv., p. 3126), it records under date the 13th of July 1653 that he petitioned to be discharged of a messuage and lands called Treworgan, etc., the jointure of Lucy Scudamore; it was allowed by the committee for removing obstructions, and petitioner purchased the same from her the 30th of May 1650 (vol. G ciii., p. 701). This petition was referred to Reading (see p. 2494, vol. xxv. G, p. 119).

In 1660 he was appointed one of the Commissioners for providing money in the county of Monmouth.[2]

In 1654, in accordance with the wishes of his late father George Milborne that he should settle his Monmouthshire and Somersetshire estates upon the heirs male of himself and Katherine his wife, and in consideration of the 1500*li.* portion he received with the said Katherine, he made a settlement of all his estate in the several capital messuages of Wonastow and Grace Dieu alias Treworgan alias Worganstone and the manors of Wonastow and Treworgan, and also one other capital messuage called Milborne Port and of the several manors of Stone, Lotsham, Hornblotton, Queen Camell, Crawthorne, Merston, Milborne Port and Compton Dondon upon William Milborne his son and heir by an Indenture dated on or about the 6th of November 1654. And for the better confirming the said premises unto the said William and his heirs he did, by his deed bearing date on or about the 20th of November 1655, for and in consideration of a sum of 1300*li.* convey, grant and release absolutely unto the said William Milborne and his heirs for ever all his estate, right and title in the said premises.[3]

In 1656 he entered into a recognizance in the sum of 700*li.* which he acknowledged he owed Evan Sayes of Lincoln's Inn in the county of Middlesex, the obligation being that if he paid 360*li.* on the 27th of December next then the recognizance to become void. Evan Sayes came before the court the 28th of June 1675, 28 Charles II., and acknowledged the receipt of the money, and the recognizance was struck off.[4] be invested with the Order of the Royal Oak and his estate was estimated at 800*li.* per annum, but this Order was not instituted.

In 1659 he appears to have taken proceedings with a view to a common recovery of his Alveston estate, for by an Indenture, dated the 7th of November 1659,[1] between Margaret Speed of the city of Oxford, widow, and John Milborne, esq., of Alveston in co. Gloucester, of the first part, Thomas Clayton of the University of Oxford, Doctor of Physic, of the second part, and William Morgan, gentleman, of Gray's Inn, of the third part, witnesseth that the said Margaret Speed and John Milborne for and in the consideration of 5*s.* paid to them by Thomas Clayton and for other good causes, etc., bargained and sold unto the said Thomas Clayton all that manor and lordship of Alleston alias Alveston in co. Gloucester with all its rights, members, etc. (with other lands, etc., fully specified), to have and to hold the same unto the said Thomas Clayton, his heirs and assigns for and during the natural life of the said Margaret Speed to the only use and behoof of the said Thomas Clayton, his heirs and assigns, to the intent and purpose to make him a good tenant of the freehold of the premises against whom a common recovery might thereof be had to the use of him and his heirs in such manner and form as was hereafter agreed and declared, nevertheless under and upon the proviso or condition that if the said Thomas Clayton, his heirs and assigns should not pay the said Margaret Speed 1000*li.* before the 25th of February next ensuing the date of this Indenture then Margaret Speed was to retake possession; and it was further covenanted between all parties that before the end of Hillary term next ensuing one writ of entry sur disseisin cult post should be sued out whereby the said William Morgan should be plaintiff against the said Thomas Clayton of and for the said manor, etc., to which the said Thomas Clayton should appear and should vouch to warranty the said John Milborne, and the said John Milborne should appear and should vouch to warranty the common voucher, and such further proceedings should be had thereupon that a good and perfect common recovery with double voucher might be executed in and upon the said writ of entry, such recovery to be to the use and behoof of Thomas Clayton and his heirs for ever, etc.

This Indenture was acknowledged by John Milborne the 12th of November and inrolled the same day.

He married first Katherine, daughter of John Dennis,[2] esq., of Pucklechurch[3] in co. Gloucester. She is mentioned with her husband on the tomb in Wonastow Church. Her brother Henry "Dennys," esq., in his will, dated the 25th of June 1638 and proved at London the 6th of October following, mentions her as follows[4]: "To my Loveinge Sister Katherine the wife of John Milborne, esquire, the like some of twentie shillings."

[1] Chancery Indentures, 1659, part 14, No. 27.

[2] Atkins in his "History of Gloucestershire," p. 320. mentions the family of Dennis as being a very ancient one and of long standing in the county, and that there have been more High Sheriffs of this family than any other.

[3] Thomas Baskerville in his Journeys in England temp. Charles II. (? about 1681-2) says: "At Puckle church lives a worthy gentleman by name Mr. John Denis, who is near related to my brother Morgan; himself, brother and mother are single people and live together; they have a good estate in lands and coal mines, and do keep a plentiful house as I found, for, Anno 1680, going thither with my brother to see them they treated us nobly for 2 or 3 days." (Historical MSS. Commission, 13th Report, Appendix, part ii., 1893. The MSS. of His Grace the Duke of Portland preserved at Welbeck, vol. ii.)

[4] Book Lee, 124, Principal Registry, Somerset House.

With this lady he appears to have had a marriage portion of 1500*li.*[1]

The issue of this marriage is stated to have been sixteen children, of whom only three sons and four daughters survived.[2] This is confirmed by the evidence of one Philip Morgan alias Waters of Llangattock in the county of Monmouth taken the 13th of January 1671.[2] At the time of her decease there appears to have been eight children living, but at the date of the deposition of Mary Kirwood, viz., 19th of April 1671, only five are stated to be then living.

The surviving issue of this marriage were:—

I. William Milborne, esq., of Wonastow, eldest son and also of the Middle Temple, London. Mentioned in his father's will that when the estate was settled upon him he was his then eldest son.[3]

He was admitted to the Middle Temple the 17th of July 1658, and was entered in the books as Mr. William, eldest son of John Milborne, late of Wonastow, co. Monmouth, esq., specially bound with Messrs. Henry Milborne and Antony Maddison, both of the "Utter Bar," the fine being 5*li.*[4]

He succeeded to the Monmouthshire and Somersetshire estates in his father's lifetime by virtue of a settlement which, he states in a bill in chancery dated the 4th of July 1660, was made by John Milborne his father for the preservation of his name and family and in pursuance of a trust reposed in him the said John Milborne by George Milborne, esq., his father.

This settlement comprised the two capital messuages called Wonastow and Grace Dieu in the parishes of Wonastow and Treworgan, co. Monmouth, and other lands, tenements, etc., in the counties of Monmouth and Somerset, and was made subject to the said William providing a sum of money to clear off his father's debts. This settlement was made by two deeds, the first dated the 1st of November 1654[5] being an Indenture of Lease of the said property for a term of one year from the preceding October at a peppercorn rent, and the second being an Indenture dated the 7th of November 1654 granting and selling the said premises to William and his heirs for ever.

This settlement appears to have been a source of great vexation between William and his father, and his father endeavoured to retake possession of the property, and after his death John Dennis of Pucklechurch, Richard Snigg and Richard Wright, yeoman, late of Mugsford, in a suit at Common Law also tried to get possession, but William obtained an Injunction out of the Court of Chancery restraining them. After this, John Dennis having died and neither he nor the other defendants having answered or given evidence in support of their demands, William petitioned to the Court of Chancery for an order to compel the attendance in Court of Richard Snigge, John Milborne, Henry Dennis, esq., son and heir of said John Dennis, Thomas Nicholls and Mary Dennis, relict and executrix of the last will and testament of the said John Dennis, to whom or some of them the said John Dennis before his death conveyed his estate and trust in lands, to shew cause.[1]

His sister Mary Kirwood, in her deposition taken at Monmouth the 19th of April 1671,[2] states that after her father made this settlement on William, her said brother William did keep and maintain the younger children of her father by Katherine his wife in a manner fit for their degree and quality.

In 1660 he was appointed Commissioner for providing money in the county of Monmouth.[3]

Named as one of the Commissioners for Assessment in England—Monmouth: William Milbourne, Assessment, 26th January 1659-60 (vol. ii., p. 1374, Acts and Ordinances of the Interregnum, 1642—60)—and named as one of the Commissioners of Militia 12 March 1659-60, p. 1437—Monmouth: William Milborne.

Lucy Milborne, his sister, in her will dated the 5th of August 1669 mentions her estate in lands which her brother William had left her.[4]

He was returned the 3rd of April 1660 as Member of Parliament for the Borough of Milborne Port, co. Somerset.[5]

He died unmarried about the 12th day of July 1660 in the chambers of his uncle Henry Milborne in the Middle Temple, London.[6]

In the accounts of Edward Bagshawe, Treasurer of the Middle Temple 1660-61, in the list of burials occurs the following entry[7]: "Wm. Milbourne 14 July 10*s*."

By his will, dated the 12th of July 1660,[8] he gave all his lands in England to Henry Milborne, esq., and his heirs for ever for the uses hereafter named, viz.: First to pay unto his father 200*li.* per annum above all charges and reprises and then to pay unto every brother and sister he had living 40*li.* per annum for ever, then to pay to Henry Milborne his uncle 300*li.*, and then to his uncle Charles Milborne 10*li.* to buy him a mourning suit. To the poor of "Winistow" (i.e., Wonastow) parish 5*li.* per annum for ever. To the poor of the parish of Milborne Port in the county of Somerset 10*li.* per annum for ever. To his father 100*li.* a year land more during his life. To every of his servants 40*s.* each. All the rest of his lands and goods whatsoever he gave unto his brothers Charles and George Milborne to them and their heirs for ever. All his lands to be equally divided between them. will at London the 20th of June 1662. The will was signed in the presence of only one witness: A. Maddison.

The bequest of 40*li.* per annum to every brother and sister living was the cause of a Chancery law suit extending over upwards of 11 years, the guardians of the children of his father by his second wife Susan claiming their right to benefit under the will.

In this suit Sir Thomas Clayton, knight, and William Clayton (named as guardians of Clayton Milborne, Elizabeth Milborne, Thomas Milborne, John Milborne and Susan Milborne, infants), together with Thomas Blanchard and Richard Blanchard, executors of Alice Blanchard,[1] deceased, and Thomas Shephard were plaintiffs, and Charles Milborne and George Milborne, brothers of William Milborne were defendants, and a commission having been granted to examine witnesses on behalf of the defendants dated the 5th of December 1670, 22 Charles II.[2]

One of the witnesses examined was Christian the wife of Henry Jones, gentleman, of Wonastow, sister to William. This examination took place at Chepstow, co. Monmouth, the 13th of January 1671. Mary Kirwood, wife of Nicholas Kirwood, gentleman, of Erdisland, co. Hereford, another sister of William, was also examined on behalf of her brothers Charles and George Milborne at Monmouth the 19th of April 1671, and deposed that being sister to William and living with him she did never hear or see him shew any love or kindness towards the children of John Milborne her father by his second wife Susan, that they never visited, but were as strangers one to the other, and that she had heard her brother William several times say that the marriage of his father John Milborne with Susan was the ruin of him and his family by Katherine his first wife, and further that her brother William always called his father's children by Katherine his first wife his brothers and sisters, but that the children of her father by Susan his second wife he called his mother-in-law's children, and that she did not believe that her brother William intended by his will to provide for the children of the said Susan equally with his own brothers and sisters by Katherine his mother.

Monumental Inscriptions in St. Alphage, London Wall, London, with Annotations.

The first church of St. Alphage was originally the south aisle of St. Mary, Elsing Spital, one of the religious houses suppressed by Henry VIII. It was also one of the churches that survived the Fire of London in 1666, but was rebuilt in 1777.

The parish was united with St. Mary the Virgin, Aldermanbury, pursuant to an Order in Council dated 13 June 1917. The church, with the exception of the tower, is now in course of demolition, and the human remains beneath the site of the church have been removed to Ilford Cemetery. The oldest coffin discovered was that of Samuel Wright, who died in 1736. A list of the names of those identified will appear at the end of the M.I.

The tower, which is situate in London Wall, is to be retained as a chapel of rest, and the memorial tablets formerly in the body of the church have been re-fixed therein.

The Family of Milborne of Somerset and Monmouthshire.[1]

Charles Milborne, esq., of Wonastow, second son, born about 1637 (see p. 69).

He appears to have been bound apprentice to John Buck, a linendraper in Bread Street in the City of London, about 1650-1 for a term of seven years at a premium of 90*li.*, and his father entered into a bond of 1000*li.* for his honesty and good behaviour, which bond is said to have been dated 2 January 1651, but he did not serve his term, differences having arisen between him and his master, which led to his father filing a Bill in Chancery against Buck.[2]

In his deposition taken at Monmouth 18 January 1667, 18 Charles II., he stated his age was thirty or thereabouts. This deposition was taken in a case in which his uncle Henry Milborne, esq., was plaintiff and Elizabeth Lewis, relict and executrix of Hugh Lewis, esq., late of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, William Jones, esq., brother of the said Elizabeth, and George Milborne were defendants. This suit appears to have had reference to the marriage settlement of the said Elizabeth Lewis.[3]

He was also one of the defendants in an action brought by the guardians of the children of her father by his second marriage with Susan Lucas to recover their share under the will of his elder brother William Milborne.[4]

A legatee under the will of his brother William Milborne 1660[5] and under the will of his sister Lucy Milborne 1669.[6] Mentioned in the will of his uncle Henry Milborne, esq., 1692,[7] who calls him Charles Milborne, esq.

He appears to have succeeded to the Wonastow estate on the death of his brother William.

In 1672 he was appointed a Commissioner[8] for raising a grant of money in the county of Monmouth, and again in 1677,[9] also in 1679[10] was appointed a Commissioner for raising a supply in the same county. In 1688[11] was appointed a Commissioner for the raising of an Aide in the county, also in 1691,[12] and again in 1692.[13]

He was one of the sworn Clerks of the Pipe who on 31 July 1691 attended the Board with the certificate of the Fees of the Clerk of the Pipe and was sworn to the truth of the same.[14]

Philip Morgan, yeoman, of Llangattock-vibon-Avell, co. Monmouth, in his deposition, taken 23 September 1672, states this Charles Milborne maintained a light horse in His Majesty's service charged upon his estate at Wonastow for about two years after the decease of his brother William, furnished with armour and other necessaries, and further deposed that he, deponent, rode the same horse at all times he was commanded so to do.[1]

9 April 1674, 26 Charles II., he and his brother George Milborne entered into a recognizance in 10,000*li.*, the conditions being that they bound themselves, their heirs, executors and assigns, according to an order in the Court of Chancery made 14 March last past, to pay Sir Thomas Clayton, knight, of the city of Oxford, 1000*li.* within one year next after date of order towards the performance of one or more decrees made in the said cause, and also to pay whatsoever more should from time to time be received by arrears or growing rents and profits of the whole estate mentioned or chargeable with the said decree.[2]

This bond was performed and the recognizance cancelled 26 May 1676, 28 Charles II.

About Easter Term 1693[3] Ellen Fisher, widow, as plaintiff, exhibited a Bill of Complaint against Charles Milborne, esq., defendant, setting forth that by an indenture of lease and release dated on or about 2 or 3 July 1690, made between the said Charles Milborne of the first part, Sir John Pye, baronet, of the second part, and the said plaintiff of the third part, the said Sir John Pye and defendant Milborne, in consideration of 5*s.* paid unto said defendant Milborne and 1500*li.* paid to the said Sir John Pye by the plaintiff, did convey to her and her heirs all the manor of Wonastow, the advowson and right of presentation to the Church of Wonastow and other property named (a very large estate described and set forth in Bill), with all appurtenances in the parishes of Wonastow, Llangattock, Rockfield, and Monmouth and other places, late in the tenure of George Milborne, his assignee or assigns, to have and to hold the same unto plaintiff for 1000 years next ensuing, with a provision that if the said Charles Milborne, his heirs, executors, administrators or assigns did pay unto the said plaintiff, her heirs, executors, and administrators or assigns the full sum of 1575*li.* at the Common Dining Hall of Gray's Inn in such manner as therein set forth, viz., 37*li.* 10*s.* on 4 January next ensuing date of deed and 1537*li.* 10*s.* on 4 July next following 1691, she, the plaintiff, should reconvey the property back.

The interest and principal being in arrear it was reported on under date 15 May 1694, and defendant Milborne was ordered to pay interest and principal due, including taxed costs amounting to 1866*li.* 17*s.* 2*d.*, less amount paid 87*li.* 10*s.* Total amount due 1779*li.* 7*s.* 2*d.* The balance to be paid by 15 August next, and it was further ordered that the time for payment be extended ten days.

He married Martha, daughter of .... Ball[4] of .... She was buried at Wonastow[5] 28 November 1683. Had issue :—

Mrs. Milborne was legatee under her father's will; as his sole executrix proved his will and codicil 24 July 1707.[17]

The Early Pedigree of Vaux of Harrowden,

AND THE

MARRIAGE OF THOMAS GIFFORD AND ELEANORA VAUX.

Communicated by G. Andrews Moriarty, Esq., A.M., LL.B. (Harvard).

Some years ago I became interested in the marriage of Thomas Gifford of Twyford with Alienora Vaux, as given in the pedigree of the Giffords of Middle Claydon recorded by Thomas Gifford, son of Sir George, in the Visitation of Bucks for 1574. This pedigree contains a number of errors, as I discovered upon a careful analysis of it in the light of contemporaneous records, but none were so perplexing as the marriage above referred to. After a great deal of research and putting together of the meagre information to be gathered I have come to certain conclusions regarding the parentage of this Alienora, and at the same time have gathered additional information regarding the early generations of the family of Vaux of Harrowden, about which there has been no certainty beyond William Vaux, who married Maud Lucy about 1434.

It is my purpose in this article to set forth my conclusions, both as regards this marriage and the early generations of the family of Vaux of Harrowden, and I shall welcome any additions or corrections that this article may evoke. I have, I may say, laboured at great disadvantage, both because on this side of the Atlantic I have been unable to make a personal search of the original records and because during the war the gathering of information at the Record Office was extremely difficult, and I therefore crave indulgence for any errors that may be noted in this article and wish to express the hope that they may be promptly corrected and criticised by anyone having more correct or additional information. In closing this introduction I wish to acknowledge my great obligations to Miss Phemie Smith of London, whose patience in searching in the Record Office and elsewhere under the trying war conditions has made this article possible.

The Herald's pedigree of the Middle Claydon Giffords commences with ". . . . Gifford of Twyford," the grandfather of the Thomas who married Alienora Vaux. This ". . . . Gifford" was Sir Thomas Gifford of Twyford, who died in 1394, and who in turn was the son of Sir John Gifford of Twyford, who died in 1370, by his wife Lucy de Morteyn, sister of Master Edmund de Morteyn, D.C.L., the King's Clerk, Canon of York and some time Escheator for Ireland, the Lord of Marston Morteyn in Bedfordshire. This Sir Thomas was succeeded at Twyford by his son Roger Gifford, Esq., who married as his second or third wife Isabel Stretley and died in 1409, leaving as his only son, Thomas, aged one year, with whose marriage we now have to deal.

In the Close Roll, 9 Hen. VI. (No. 281), m. 14^{d}, there is a release dated 1 Sept., 9 Hen. VI., by "Thomas Gifford, son and heir of Roger Gifford, to John Stokys and Isabel, now his wife, formerly the wife of the said Roger, of the manor of Twyford in Bucks, and Bekbroke and Newnton in County Oxford, which William Stretele and William Kyng conveyed to Roger Gifford aforesaid, now deceased, and the said Isabel, then his wife, and their issue, with remainder to the right heirs of the said Roger."

We may therefore, I think, take it as established that Isabel, the widow of Roger Gifford, who died in 1409, married secondly John Stokes, and that she had by her first husband a son Thomas Gifford, born in or about 1408.

The Herald's pedigree then states that this Thomas Gifford married Alienora, daughter and heiress of Sir Thomas Vaux of Fringford, and they give the Giffords a Vaux quartering. I expect to shew that Alienora was not only not the daughter of a Sir Thomas Vaux, but that no such person as Sir Thomas Vaux of Fringford existed, and that she was not an heiress or even a co-heiress, and, consequently, the Giffords of Twyford had no right to quarter the Vaux arms.

In the first place, I have been unable to find any "Sir Thomas Vaux of Fringford." This latter place, a village in Oxfordshire, was originally part of the Barony of Arsic; it passed by the marriage of Alexandra Arsic, daughter and co-heiress of Robert, the last Arsic baron, to Thomas de la Hay, and with their daughter and heiress, Alexandra de la Hay, to the family of de Gardine or Gardinis. Thomas de Gardinis died in the 2 Edward III., leaving as his heir John Gifford, the younger, of Twyford, son of his daughter Alexandra, deceased. So we see that ever since the beginning of Edward III.'s reign Fringford had been part of the Gifford inheritance, and its descent can be traced through the various members of the Gifford family down to the Thomas in question, and it is perfectly clear that Fringford was not acquired through the Vaux, but through the Gardine marriage.

The evidence upon which the marriage of Thomas Gifford and Alienora Vaux is based appears to be an indenture bond in the Close Rolls, 5 Feb., 8 Hen. VI. (280), M. 13, whereby Thomas Gifford of Twyford, Esq., and John Stokes of Twyford, Esq., bound themselves for £200 to Thomas Chambre, Esq., William Vaux, Esq., and Thomas Tresham, Esq., the condition being that Alienora, daughter of William Vaux, Esq., deceased, shall have a sufficient estate for her life in the manors of Astwell and Helydon in Northamptonshire and in two carucates of land in Water Stratford, county of Buckingham, which were late of Roger Gifford, and it shall be lawful for the said Alienora to commit waste, etc.

This appears to be a marriage agreement, although it is not so stated, and that it is such is indicated by the fact that the I.P.M. of Thomas shews that his son John was born in or about 1431.

Bridges in his "History of Northamptonshire," under the manor of Astwell states that in 36 Henry VI. Thomas Gifford and wife Eleanor levied a fine at Astwell on Gifford le Bossis manor, with Thomas Billing and Catherine his wife. (Bridges' "Northamptonshire," vol. i., p. 214, citing Rot. fin. anno 36 Hen. VI.; MS. Hatton.) A long search has failed to reveal the fine referred to, but as the fines have been rearranged since Bridges' time this is not remarkable. Baker, who was a very painstaking antiquary, also states that Thomas Gifford released Astwell to Thomas Billing and Catherine his wife, and I think we may assume that such a fine was available in his time. This would shew that Thomas Gifford did actually marry a wife Alienora, and incidentally it proves that Astwell was part of the inheritance of Gifford of Twyford, "Gifford le Boef" being the designation of the early members of the Twyford family; and it also goes to shew that—in spite of the opinion of General Wrottesley—Sir Thomas Billing, the Chief Justice, did marry Katherine, the daughter of Roger Gifford of Twyford by a former marriage, and that she was half-sister of the Thomas in question.

At this point we may assume, I think, that Thomas Gifford of Twyford married, in or about 8 Hen. VI., Alienora, daughter of William Vaux, then deceased, and had a son and heir John, who was born in 1431. (I.P.M. Thomas Gifford 8 Edw. IV.)

The question now arises, who was the "William Vaux, deceased," of the Indenture Bond of 8 Hen. VI.? and this brings us to the two rival pedigrees of the family of Vaux of Harrowden, one recorded in Harleian MSS. 1529, fo. 83, and that in Nichols' "Leicestershire," vol. iii., part ii., p. 1129, from the Chetwynd MSS. The Harleian pedigree is as follows:—

Vaulx=da. & Heir. of Thirning by ye dau. & heir. of . . . . Braybrooke.

William Vaulx=daughter & heiress of William Harrowden of Harrowden.

William Vaulx of Harrowden=daughter & heiress of Chambres.

daughter=. . . . Tresham of Sziwell.

William Vaulx=Eleanor, daughter and heiress of Sir Thomas Drakelow Kt.

Thomas Tresham.

Sir William Vaulx=Maud daughter and heiress of Sir Geoffrey Lucie Kt.

The pedigree in Nichols' "Leicestershire," vol. iii., pt. ii., p. 1129, reads as follows:—

Pedigree of Vaux of Shankton.

John de Vaux.

Robert de Vaux de Bodesham, co. Cambridge.

Elias de Vaux.

William Vaux, 17 Rich. II.=Johanna, daughter of Anacloset, wife of John Russell of Bedford. (In a footnote he states that she brought her husband the manors of Shankton and Napton.)

William Vaux.=daughter and heiress of Chambres, or as others say Helen d. of Thomas Drakelowe,

William Vaux, Harrowden = Maud Lucy.

Sir William Vaux, Knt. = daughter of Gregory Penison of Converto in the Piedmont.

Sir Nicholas Vaux, Knt., created Lord Vaux of Harrowden by Henry VIII.

This raises the question which, if either, of these pedigrees is correct, or which is the more correct, and for this purpose it is necessary to go back to the reign of Edward III. and examine the descent of certain of the Vaux manors.

Sir William Vaux, son of Sir William Vaux and Maud, daughter and heiress of Sir Geoffrey Lucy, Knt., was born about 1435, as is shewn by the Chancery Inquisition Post Mortem of Sir William Lucy, Knt., his uncle (Chancery I.P.M., I. Edw. IV., file 1, No. 16). Here it is stated that William Vaux, Esq., son of Maud, a sister of Sir William Lucy, is one of his heirs and next-of-kin, aged 24 years and more. This William Vaux, Esq., afterwards Sir William Vaux, was the gallant Lancastrian knight who sealed his devotion to the Red Rose with his life on Tewkesbury Field.

On 12 Oct. 4 Edw. IV. an inquisition of his estates was taken by the Yorkist Escheator, he having been attainted for high treason by that party. He had many manors in different counties, and a large part of his estates came from the Lucys; with these we at present have nothing to do. The names that interest us are those of Shankton, Napton, Wilby, Bodenham, and his lands at Swaffham. Shankton is in Leicestershire, Napton in Warwickshire, Wilby in Northamptonshire, and Bodenham and Swaffham in Cambridgeshire. He also held the advowsons at Shankton and Wilby and the manor of Great Harrowden in Northamptonshire (Chancery Inquisitions Misc., file 319, No. 45).

We will now take up the history of the three manors of Shankton, Napton, and Wilby from the reign of Edward III.

Nichols, in his "History of Leicestershire," vol. ii., part ii., p. 790, states that in 1315 John de Wyleby was lord of the manor of Shankton, and levied a fine upon it to his own use for life, remainder to his son Robert and Emma his wife, remainder to the heirs of their bodies. He seized upon the advowson of the church there, and was impleaded by the Abbey and Convent of Lilleshall. Later, in the reign of Edward III., Thomas de Drakelow was certified as its patron, and in 1346 Alice de Willoughby was assessed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in Shankton and Hardwick. He then goes on to state that Eleanor, heir general of Willoughby, was married to Thomas Chambre of Spratton, Northants, who in 1424 and for several subsequent years held regular courts here, and in 1431 levied a fine on this and other manors in this county and Warwickshire to Roger Buckland and his heirs. It subsequently, he says, passed by an heir female to Sir William Vaux, a faithful and active adherent of the house of Lancaster.

In the Feudal Aids, 1428, we find the following:—

"De Thoma Chambre pro medietate un. f. m. quam tenet ex jure Alionore, uxoris eius in Shankton, Hardewyk et quam Alicia Wyloughby nuper tenuit ibidem sicut, etc. Subsidium iij*s.* iii*d.*"

This manor escheated upon the attainder of Sir William Vaux for high treason in the 4 Edward IV., and it was bestowed upon Sir Ralph Hastings, a minion of the House of York. Richard III. confirmed it to Hastings (Pat. 1 Rich. III.), but upon the restoration of the Lancastrian party after Bosworth, King Henry VII. restored it to Sir Nicholas Vaux, afterwards Lord Harrowden, son of Sir William, who died seized of it. His son Thomas, Lord Vaux, conveyed Shankton and Hardwick by a fine in the 3 and 4 Philip and Mary to John Wysley, Esq., and Dorothy his wife, in whom it thereafter remained.

Turning now to the manor of Napton in Warwickshire we find in Dugdale's "Antiquities of Warwickshire," vol. i., p. 307, the statement that at Napton is a "manor called Vaux, his manor." Upon this manor there was levied 9 Edw. II. a fine between Robert de Harewedon, pl., and John de Wileby, deforciant, which settled the manor on the said Robert for life, remainder to Robert, son of John de Wileby and Emma his wife, and the heirs of their bodies, and in default thereof to the right heirs of John de Wileby. In the 6 Hen. VI. Thomas Chambre and wife Elianore levied a fine upon this and other manors in Leicestershire and Buckinghamshire to Richard Buckland and his heirs, with a warranty against the heirs of Eleanor, which points to the fact that she had inherited the manor but the uses were in Thomas Chambre of Spratton, Esq., who in 10 Hen. VI. was certified to hold the same by the fourth part of a knight's fee. He then states that he has not seen how it passed from Chambre to Vaux "but that in the reign of Edward IV. it escheated to the crown by the attainder of Sir William Vaux," but I find that on 1 July, 17 Hen. VII., Sir Nicholas Vaux held eight messuages in Napton on the Hill (Cal. Inq., Hen. VII., vol. ii., p. 394).

This brings us to the manor and advowson of Wilby in Northants. On 5 August 1373 "Simon Symeon rat. concess. per Thomas Drakelowe, patron, appointed Peter Mongeles ptr." to the living of Wilby. On 24 April 1403 William Vaux appointed Rich. Aleyn clerk. On 10 Feb. 1428 Reginald Gray appointed John Wilchese. On 3 March 1445 Thomas Chambre, arm., and Elianore his wife appointed John Gybon, and on 15 Nov. 1454 William Vaux, arm., appointed Thomas Aleynson ptr. (See Bridges' "Northamptonshire," vol. ii., p 155, which cites the Bishop of Lincoln's Registers.) Bridges' "Northamptonshire" states that the I.P.M. of William Lord Vaux, 37 Eliz., shews that he was seized of the manor and advowson of Wilby, and that it passed to his heir Edward Vaux (Exc. Eliz., No. 121, p. 2). (Vol. i., p. 67.)

Baker, in his "Northamptonshire," described Sir Thomas Drakelowe as of Wilby, Northants, and in Feudal Aids, Northampton, 1428, I find "De Thoma de Chambre pri. j. f. in Willoughby quondam Richardi Maunderyle. Sub. vj s. viii d."

These items compel me to adopt the following conclusions: These manors and advowsons were originally, in the reign of Edward II., in the hands of John de Wileby, from whom they passed to his son Robert and his wife Emma, who died leaving as their heiress Alice de Wileby, who held them in 1346. She in turn married Sir Thomas Drakelow, who held them jure uxoris.

By a deed enrolled, dated at Napton on Thursday, Easter Week, 43 Edward III., Thomas, son of Thomas Drakelow, gave to Sir John Ragon, chevalier, and John de Merton, parson of the church of Great Bryknulle, the manor of Napton and the advowson of the church there, to them and their heirs and assigns and warranted to them. (Close Roll, 43 Edw. III., No. 207, m. 27^{d}.)

On 26 March 1378 a writ was directed from Westminster to John Gray of Cokenore, Thomas Grene, James Belerys, John Hauberk, William Bernak and Simon Symeon to enquire in Leicestershire as to the deaths of Thomas Drakelowe and his brother Robert and Thomas Bore that was servant to Thomas Drakelowe, who were killed at Alhokeston, and how and by whom and in what manner, etc. (Pat. Rolls, 1 Rich. II., pt. 4, No. 300, m. 4^{d}.)

We may now conclude that Alienore, the daughter and heiress of either Thomas Drakelowe, senior, or his son Thomas Drakelowe, junior, more probably of the latter, was married to William Vaux before 24 April 1403, on which date he appointed to the living of Wilby.

William Vaux made his will on the day before the Assumption of the Blessed Mary 1405, which was proved 1 Sept. 1405 [Bishop Repington's Register, f. 17 (Ep. Linc.)]. In this will he makes William Thirning, "militem," his supervisor, and leaves a few bequests to servants and others and provides that Thomas Hayton shall have his lands and tenements in the town of Northampton for his life, and leaves the residue of his goods to his executors, John Gifford, William Rothewell and Thomas Hayton, to dispose of for the good of his soul.

It should now be noted that from this date until 15 Hen. VI. the name of William Vaux disappears from Northamptonshire, at which date William Vaux was High Sheriff of Northants, and in 20 Hen. VI. he was knight of the shire for that county.

This leads us to the conclusion that William Vaux left a widow, Alienora, who prior to 1424 was married to Thomas Chambre of Spratton, probably as his second wife, and that the latter held Napton, Shankton and Wilby by her right, and that the said Eleanor died between 3 March 1445 and 15 November 1454, on which latter date William Vaux presented to the living of Wilby.

It is now necessary to consider the Chambre pedigree. Baker states that Thomas Chambre of Spratton was the son of Sir William Chambre of Spratton. Thomas first appears in the Patent Rolls in 1 Hen. V. (1413), 3, mem. 23, when Thomas Chambre, Esq., of Northamptonshire was summoned to answer for a debt due to a London citizen, and again in the 9 Hen. V. In 1 Hen. VI. he was M.P. for Northamptonshire, and prior to that, in 1419, he appointed to the living of Holdenby. We find that in 1385 Roger del Chambre was patron of this living, of which Thomas was patron in 1419, 1432, 1438 and 1445. In 1458 William Chambre appointed to the living of Holdenby. This shews us that Thomas Chambre, who married Alienore (Drakelowe) Vaux, was dead before 1458, and it is significant that the living of Holdenby, which belonged to the Chambre family, is presented by William Chambre in 1458, whereas the presentation of Wileby has passed to William Vaux.

On 9 April, 9 Hen. VII., the I.P.M. of William Chambre was taken; it states that he died on 19 February last past holding the manors of Clipston, Spratton, and Holdenby manor and advowson, and that his brother (not son, as Baker has it) John Chambre, clerk, is his next heir, aged 50 years and more. (Chancery Inquisition Post-mortem, Series ii., file 9, No. 60.) This shews that they could hardly be the children of Thomas Chambre of Spratton, who was of age in the 1 Hen. V., and that they must be two children of his son William, who presented to the living of Holdenby in 1458. An examination of the pedigree of Chambre of Spratton in Baker's "Northants" will shew that he took this view, and that he gives the following pedigree (Baker's "Northamptonshire," vol. i., p. 67) :—

2. Sir Thomas Chambre, M.P. 1, 9, 13 Hen. VI.; Sheriff 5, 11, 16 Hen. VI.; levied a fine on Napton and Shankton 1431. = Eleanor, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Drakelow of Wilby.

1. Sir William Vaux.

William Chambre of Spratton, Esq., ob. 19 Feb. 1494, Esc. 6 Hen. VII., m. 60. = Mary, dau. of Walter Mauntel of Hayford, Esq.

2. William Chambre, founded a chantry at Aldwinckle 4 Nov. 1489; ob. s.p. 6 Hen. VII. = Elizabeth, dau. of . . . . Dutton; ob. 10 June 1490; Esc. 6 Hen. VII., m. 79.

1. William Aldwinckle of Aldwinckle, ob. 1466.

Rev. John Chambre, æt. 50, 9 Hen. VII., Rector of Holdenby; ob. 26 Dec. 1505.

Ellen, ob. prior to 22 Hen. VII. = Henry Maxe.

Elizabeth, æt. 50, 22 Hen. VII. = Richard Inguersby.

This view is also borne out by an item in the Plea Rolls 16 Oct. 18 Edward IV., whereby John Skynner, late of Thrapston, co. Northampton, yeoman, and Margaret his wife, executrix of William Chambre, were summoned for failing to answer a plea.

The Patent Rolls also contain the following items :—

33 Henry VI., Part 2, Mem. 15. Thomas Chambre is mentioned with Walter Lucy and others as to an inquisition in the case of an idiot.

9 Edward IV., Part 1, Mem. 23. William Chambre and his wife, late the wife of William Aldwinckle, Esq., of Northampton, are mentioned in connection with the founding of a chantry; and in the 9, 10, and 13 Edw. IV. William Chambre was a Justice of the Peace in Northamptonshire.

This brings us to one of the points for which this article was written, namely, to establish the parentage of Alienora Vaux, who married Thomas Gifford of Twyford. The bond was upon one side Thomas Gifford and his step-father John Stokes, and on the other Thomas Chambre, William Vaux, and Thomas Tresham. It is dated 8 Henry VI. We may, I think, assume that the parties of the second part were closely connected with Alienora, daughter of William Vaux, deceased. Thomas Chambre had married Alienora, widow of William Vaux, whose son William Vaux was M.P. for Northants in 1441, and last appears in the Patent Rolls 38 Hen. VI., part ii. (No. 489), m. 19, when on the 8 Feb. 1460 William Vaux, the elder, esq., was exempted for life from service in certain civil offices. So it would appear that they are the step-father and brother of Alienora Vaux respectively, and that she was named after her mother, born Alienora Drakelowe.

There still remains Thomas Tresham to be considered in this respect. The Harleian pedigree states that his mother was a Vaux, and in Vincent's Visitation Notes, Harl. MSS., it is stated that Thomas Tresham was the son of Sir William Tresham of Siwell by his wife Isabel, daughter of Sir William Vaux. This Sir William Tresham appears to have represented Northampton in the parliament of 2 Hen. VI. and in the succeeding parliaments. Thomas first appears as M.P. for Northamptonshire in the parliament of 31 Hen. VI. Clearly this Thomas could not have been the one who appears in the bond of the 8 Hen. VI. But the heralds state that Sir William was the son of another Thomas Tresham of Siwell. I have as yet found no evidence that there was such a person, unless he be the Thomas Tresham who is stated to have levied a fine in the 16 Hen. VI.

Moreover, if Sir William Tresham married Isabel, daughter of William Vaux, she must have been a sister of Alienora, and was not the daughter of Sir William Vaux, but of William Vaux, Esq., who married Alienora Drakelowe. The Elizabethan heralds appear to have been somewhat careless with their titles. Nevertheless, although I cannot place the exact relationship between Thomas Tresham and the other parties on the bond we may conclude he was a near connection of Alienora Vaux.

There seems then that there can be scarcely any doubt that Alienora Vaux, who married Thomas Gifford, was the daughter of William and Alienora (Drakelow) Vaux and the sister of William Vaux, Esq., who married Maud Lucy.

As a result of the above evidence, taken from the original records, I deduce the following pedigree:—

John de Wileby, held Shankton, Napton, and Wilby in the time of Edward II. = ...

Robert de Wileby, mar. prior to 9 Edward II. = Emma.

Alice de Wileby, heiress, holding Shankton in 1346; mar. after that date. = Thomas Drakelowe, mar. shortly after 1346.

Thomas Drakelowe, born about 1348; murdered prior to 26 March 1378; 43 Edw. III. gave a deed of Napton. = A

Robert Drakelowe, murdered prior to 26 March 1378.

A

1. William Vaux of Northampton, Esq., Commissioner of Peace in Bucks 1401; ob. 1405. = Alienora Drakelow, born about 1370; mar. (2) before 1424; died between 1445 and 1454. = 2. Thomas Chambre of Spratton, 1 Hen. V.; died between 1452 and 1458. = 1. ....

William Vaux, Esq., held Napton, Shankton and Wileby, born about 1400; M.P. 1441; High Sheriff 15 Hen. VI.; died about 1460. = Maud, dau. of Sir Geoffry Lucy.

Alienora, born about 1405; mar. 1430. = Thomas Gifford, Esq., of Twyford, born 1408.

William Chambre, born about 1410; died prior to 1477. = [Margaret ...., mar. (2) John Skinner, yeoman?].

Sir William Vaux, born about 1435; slain at Tewkesbury. = ..., dau. of Gregory Penistone of Coverto in Piedmont.

John Gifford, Esq., of Twyford, born 1431.

William, born about 1435; died 19 Feb. 9 Hen. VII. = Elizabeth, widow of William Aldewynckle.

John Chambre, clerk, born 1444.

The remaining question is, who was William Vaux, who married Alienora Drakelow, and what was his ancestry? The references to him in the records are scanty, but there seems to be little doubt but that he is identical with the testator of 1405, although the latter does not mention his children in his will, all the bequests being to the church, his servants, and two friends, but it is to be noted that after the decease of the testator the name of William Vaux disappears from the records until William Vaux, the brother of Alienora, appears as Sheriff of Northants in 15 Hen. VI. Moreover, in his will the testator of 1405 devises as follows: "I will that Thomas Hayton shall have all my lands and tenements in the town of Northampton to the end of his life."

The confiscation of the estates of William Vaux, the Lancastrian, in the 4 Edw. IV. states that in Northampton town he held a tenement called "Key" in the occupation of William Dissy, and another tenement in Gold Street towards St. Peter's Church in the occupation of John Irthingbourgh.

Among the bequests is one to the Priory of Harewald of 20 marks.

A Chancery Inquisition Ad Quod Damnum, File 428, No. 2, taken at St. Neot's in Huntingdon on the Thursday next before the feast of St. Mark the Bishop 21 Rich. II., says that it is not to the damage of the King to allow William Thirning and William Vaux to grant six messuages, 110 acres of land in Gyllyng and Henryngford Abbot to the Prior and Convent of Harwold, and states that the messuage in Henryngford Abbot is held of Reginald Gray of Ruthyn, Knt., and that William Thirning and William Vaux have divers other lands; accordingly a licence was granted to them to convey the lands (Patent Roll 21 Rich. II., m. 24).

On 12 Dec. 1399 a licence was granted to Edward, Earl of Rutland, and others, including William Vaux (Patent Rolls 1 Henry IV., pt. 8, 361, m. 28).

On 21 Feb. 1401 a Commission was granted to William Vaux and others, including the Sheriff of Northants, to enquire regarding who have occupied the lands of Lawrence Pabynham, chevalier, deceased, a tenant in chief of Richard II. (Pat. Roll, 2 Hen. IV., pt. ii., No. 363, m. 31 d).

On 16 May, 2 Hen. IV., a commission as Justice of the Peace in Bucks was issued to William Vaux. (Pat. Roll, 2 Hen. IV., pt. 2, No. 363, m. 15[d].)

A pardon, dated 31 May 1403, was granted to Richard Earl of Warwick for conveying by deed the manor of Walshale in Staffordshire and the manor of Multon in Northants and three parts of the manor of Olney in Bucks to William Thirning, chevalier, William Vaux and others. (Pat. Rolls, 4 Hen. IV., pt. ii., No. 369, m. 17.)

17 April, 6 Henry IV., Reginald Gray of Ruthyn, Kt., going on the king's service in Wales gave a power of attorney to Gerard Braybrooke, chevalier, and William Vaux. (Pat. Roll, 6 Hen. IV., pt. ii., No. 373, m. 27.)

13 Oct., 4 Henry IV., licence was given to Reginald Gray of Ruthyn, chevalier, who had been captured by Owen Gleyndowr, to send William de Roos, chevalier, Richard de Gray, chevalier, William de Willughby, chevalier, William de Zouche, chevalier, Hugh Huls, chevalier, John Harvey and William Vaux to treat with Owen and his council regarding the ransom. (Pat. Rolls, Calander.)

These complete the references to William Vaux prior to 15 Hen. VI. (1437), and it should be noted that William Thirning (militem) was the supervisor of the will of William Vaux, the testator of 1405.

The above references shew that William Vaux was closely associated with William Thirning.

Turning now to the descent of the manor of Harrowden, which was among the estates of William Vaux confiscated in 4 Edward IV., we find that in 34 Edward III. John de Lewkenore conveyed Harrowden, magna and parva, to Simon Simeon, who levied a fine upon it in fee simple. In 1 Richard II. the said Simon settled the manor on himself and his wife Elizabeth. He died in 11 Richard II., leaving his widow in possession. In 12 Rich. II. a fine was levied on the manor by John de la Ware and his wife Elizabeth, who settled the manor on Thomas de la Ware, Canon of Lincoln, for life, remainder to himself. He died 22 Rich. II., leaving a brother Thomas de la Ware, who in 11 Henry IV. conveyed the manor to Sir William Thirning, and from him it seems to have passed to William Vaux, father of the Lancastrian knight, but how is not shewn. (See Bridges' "Northamptonshire.")

It thus appears that Harrowden, from which in the next century the family derived their title, did not come into the possession of the Vaux family until some time after 11 Hen. IV. We have already seen that the testator of 1405 was closely associated with Sir William Thirning, who was seized of the manor.

We now turn to find who were the ancestors of this William Vaux, who in Burke's "Dormant and Extinct Baronies" is given a long pedigree without any authority therefor, and in this connection we must turn to the pedigree in Nichols' "Leicestershire," which so far as the descent of the manors of Shankton and Napton go is incorrect in stating that they came from a marriage of a William Vaux with Johanna, daughter of Anacloset Russell. But in this pedigree William Vaux is stated to descend from Robert de Vaux of Bodesham in Cambridgeshire. We have seen that among the lands of William Vaux confiscated 4 Edw. IV. was the manor of Bodesham or Botesham and a messuage, 100 acres of land and 20 of meadow in Swapham (Swaffham), Cambridgeshire.

An indenture of 38 Edw. II. regarding 85 acres 2 rods of land of rental of 51*s.* 7*d.* in Bodekesham and of 60*s.* rental in Swaffham recites that the land is the same as that passed by a fine levied in the King's Court 11 Edward I. between Adam de Sancto Licio and Isolda his wife, plaintiffs, and Ellis de Bekyngham, Robert de Vaux and Alicia his wife, deforciants.

In the Feudal Aid of 1346 Bodenham Priory was held by Thomas de Vaux and Gilbert Bernard.

On 10 March 1327 Thomas, son of John Vaux of Swaffham, was pardoned for a homicide, and on 5 Oct. 1335 Thomas de Vaux of Bodesham, parson of Adyngburgh, acknowledged a debt to be levied on his goods in Notts.

From the above items we may deduce the origin of the ancient family of Vaux of Harrowden, disregarding all statements made without offer of proof. The family at present can be traced to William Vaux of Northamptonshire, where we find him in 1401 and 1403 closely associated with William Thirning, Knt. He is beyond all doubt the testator of 1405, and was probably descended from the Robert Vaux of Bodesham in the 11 Edw. I. This William married, probably about 1400, Alienora, daughter and heiress of Thomas Drakelowe, by whom he had at least two children, William Vaux, afterwards William Vaux of Harrowden, Esq., and Alienora, who married in 1430 Thomas Gifford of Twyford, and probably a third daughter Isabel, who married Sir William Tresham of Siwell, who first appears as a financial official in the reign of Henry V.

William Vaux II. married about 1434 Maud Lucie, and had issue the Lancastrian knight Sir William Vaux, born about 1435, who died at Tewkesbury.

No attempt has been made to trace the pedigree on yet beyond William Vaux of Northampton, who married Eleanor Drakelow, and further research would undoubtedly establish his line back to the Vaux family seated at Bodesham in Cambridgeshire.

In conclusion I may state that I have compiled at length a pedigree of the family of Giffords of Twyford and Middle Claydon, shewing their descent from John Gifford le Boef of Twyford in 1284, and in the female line from Manasser de Arsic, who flourished in 1103, down to their descendant William Sargent of Northampton, who emigrated to New England in 1638, which will appear in the New England Historic Genealogical Register in the near future.

The Family of Milborne of Somerset and Monmouthshire.[1]

III. George Milborne, esq., of Grace Dieu, also Treworgan alias Worganstone, co. Monmouth, third son[2] of John Milborne and Katherine (see ante, p. 63).

One of the defendants in an action brought by the guardians of the children of his father by his second wife Susan.[2]

Entered into a recognizance with his brother Charles Milborne 9 April 1674,[3] 26 Charles II., in 10,000*li.* (see ante, p. 92).

He is the George Milborne referred to by William Bedloe, the informer, in his examination with reference to the (supposed) plot to assassinate King Charles II. and raise an insurrection in the kingdom with a view to re-establish the Roman Catholic power. This Bedloe is described by Hume,[4] the historian, as "a man, if possible, more infamous than Oates." Bedloe, in his examination,[5] said that George Milborne (a Papist) was one of the several appointed to attend a gathering in Wales under Lord Powis and Lord Petre, from thence to march to Milford Haven to meet an army from Spain. In his examination at the Bar on 12 Nov. he first named Charles Milborne of Monmouth.[6] But on 23 Nov. the Committee reported that Bedloe had told them that he had given the name of Charles in mistake for George.[7] By an Order dated 21 Dec. 1678, Bedloe was commanded to attend the House on 23 Dec., at which time George Milborne was to be brought to the Bar of the House.[8] The House ordered George Milborne to be attached.[9] On 28 December the House ordered him to be brought to the Bar to confront Bedloe, who demanded the benefit of the proclamation.[10] These proceedings of 28 Dec. are fully recorded in the records.[11] Annexed to the proceedings is the draft order dated 28 Dec. for the Serjeant-at-Arms to deliver George Milborne in the Gatehouse.[11]

In the list of names of Papists of Monmouthshire[12] delivered to the Committee for the Papists (Removal and Disarming) Bill 4 Dec. 1680, and selected on 16 Dec. for the purposes of the Bill, occurs the name of Mr. George "Milburne," with a note that his income was 400*li.* per annum. This Bill being never reported was stopped.

He was a legatee under the wills of his brother William Milborne, 1660,[13] and of his sister Lucy Milborne, 1669.[14] Mentioned in the will of Henry Milborne, esq., 1692, as George Milborne, esq., deceased.[15]

He married Margery[1] .... She was buried 2 Dec. 1715 at Wonastow.[1] Probably this was the Margery Milborne, widow, of Monmouth, legatee under the will of Elizabeth Milborne, 1689,[2] and whose children, John Milborne, Elizabeth, Clare and Grace, were also legatees under the same will.

He was buried 6 April 1689 at Wonastow,[1] co. Monmouth. Had issue:—

I. William Milborne, gentleman, of Monmouth.[3] Legatee under the will of Henry Milborne, 1692.[4]

He was appointed a Commissioner for the collection of an Aide in co. Monmouth in 1698,[5] and in 1708[6] a Commissioner of Land Tax for the same county, and again in the years 1710[7] and 1713.[8]

He married Margaret,[9] daughter of Richard Gwilliam of Whitchurch, at the parish church of Harewood, co. Hereford, 3 Nov. 1696.[10] Buried 27 April 1720 at Wonastow.[1]

Will dated 23 Jan. 1718,[3] as of the town of Monmouth, gentleman. To his beloved wife Margaret all his manors, messuages, lands, tenements, etc., as well freehold as lease and copyhold, with their appurtenances, situate, etc., in the co. and town of Monmouth, during the term of her natural life without impeachment of waste. To Christopher Perkins, son of his nephew Christopher Perkins, esq.,[11] all that his messuage or tenement in which he dwelled and inhabited, with the garden thereto then in his possession, with his meadow commonly called Humfreys Meadow and the land inclosed therewith, also his little meadow (about 2 acres) at the "blacknorles"[12] with their appurtenances then also in his possession, situate within the precincts of the town of Monmouth and being part of the said estate given to his said wife for her life, and the reversions, remainders and services thereof, to hold the same in reversion immediately after the decease of his said wife to him the said Christopher Perkins, the son and the heirs of his body lawfully begotten, with remainder to Richard Perkins his brother, another of the sons of the said Christopher Perkins the elder, esq., and the heir of his body lawfully begotten, and with remainder to Cecilla Perkins, daughter of the said Christopher the elder, her heirs and assigns for ever. Grace Milborne.[1] Legatee under the will of her sister Lucy Milborne, 1669.

In her deposition, taken 23 Sept. 1672,[2] describes herself as a spinster, age about 35 years, and that after father's death she went to reside with her brother William Milborne, who found her in meat and drink and part of her clothing, and also states that her brother Charles Milborne did maintain her sisters of the whole blood, viz., Mrs. Christian, Mary and Lucy Milborne. She mar. Richard Vaughan, vicar of Wonastow.

Christian Milborne.[1] Legatee under the will of her sister Lucy Milborne, 1669. Married Henry Jones, gent., of Penrose in the co. of Monmouth [son of Sir Philip Jones, Knt.]. Living at Wonastow in 1671.

On 3rd Dec. 1666, 18 Chas. II.,[3] a commission was granted to administer interrogatories to witnesses on the part of Henry Milborne, esq., plaintiff, against Elizabeth Lewis, widow and executrix of Hugh Lewis, esq., late of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, and William Jones and Henry Jones, her brothers, and George Milborne, defendants. This suit relates to the marriage settlement of Elizabeth Lewis beforementioned.

In the Depositions taken at Monmouth 18 Jan. 1667, 18 Chas. II., among other evidence John Harris deposed that Henry Jones and Elizabeth Lewis were brother and sister, and that George Milborne and Christian, wife of Henry Jones, were nephew and niece of Henry Milborne, the plaintiff; and Charles Milborne stated that Christian, wife of Henry Jones, was sister to William Milborne, esq.

Had issue:—

Lucy Jones. God-daughter of, and legatee under the will of, her aunt Lucy Milborne, 1669.

Mary Milborne. Resided with her brother William Milborne at Wonastow during his lifetime. Legatee under the will of her sister Lucy Milborne, 1669, and of Henry Milborne, 1692. Married Nicholas Kirwood, gent., of Eardisland, co. Hereford.

She was married before 19 April 1671, at which date she was examined as a witness in the suit brought against her brothers Charles and George Milborne by the guardians of the children of her father by Susan, his second wife.[1]

Nicholas Kirwood was a legatee under the will of Lucy Milborne, his sister-in-law, and also a legatee under the will of Henry Milborne, esq.

Had issue four children. Referred to, but not named, in the will of Henry Milborne, 1692.

ARTHUR J. JEWERS.

ARTHUR JOHN JEWERS.

An Appreciation.

It is with the greatest regret that we record the death of Mr. Arthur John Jewers, son of Frederick Arthur Jewers and grandson of Commander Richard Jewers, R.N., for many years a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries, who passed away on 20 April 1921 at 1 Keat's Grove, Hampstead.

When still in his 'teens he was an ardent student of Heraldry and Genealogy. His energies were not, however, confined to such studies, for he was passionately fond of the sea, and spent much of his time in all aquatic sports, which his residence at Plymouth enabled him to enjoy to the full. One of the greatest regrets of his life was not having followed the profession of his grandfather and his uncle, Capt. Richard Jewers, R.N.

His knowledge of heraldry was wonderful, as apart from being one of our leading heraldic artists, it was almost impossible to put before him an English coat of arms that he could not identify without reference to any printed book or manuscript.

Whilst still a young man he had completed several very beautiful manuscript volumes. His "Hampshire Church Notes" consisted principally of copies of monumental inscriptions in over one hundred Hampshire churches, with tricks of arms; this volume is now in the British Museum. Another volume was devoted to pedigrees and notes of West Country families, and is now in the possession of Mr. A. J. Radford, Vacye, near Malvern. His "Devonshire Church Notes," commenced about this time, were unfortunately never completed, but the MS. has since been presented to the Albert Memorial Library, Exeter. He also visited Cornwall, and compiled a volume of "Church Notes" for that county, a part of which he published under the title of "Heraldic Church Notes in the Deanery of East." In 1881 he transcribed and published the "Parish Registers of St. Columb Major." At various times he delivered a number of lectures before the Plymouth Institution, on local heraldry, etc., which have been printed.

In the spring of 1888 he settled at Wells, where he continued to devote his time to antiquarian researches, and here it was he compiled the majority of his best works, in which he received, as always, the whole-hearted assistance of his wife, who accompanied him on all his expeditions, collecting materials for "Somerset Church Notes" and other works. At Wells he copied all the inscriptions in the Cathedral, which, with arms and copious notes, were published in 1892. He next turned his attention to the "Marriage Allegation Bonds of Bath and Wells," which he copied from the beginning to 1755, and were published in 1909. Here also he undertook the tremendous task of arranging the whole of the Bishops' transcripts, and copied all those that were in a fragmentary condition; these were published in two large volumes in 1913 and 1914. In 1898 he copied and printed the registers of Street, Somerset, and was responsible for numerous pamphlets of local interest, and various papers published in the proceedings of the Devon and Somerset Archæological Societies.

Having always lived in the West Country he had not, with the exception of a few visits, been able to do much work in London, until, owing to unfortunate circumstances, he was compelled to turn his hobby into his profession, and moved to Hampstead. One of the first works he started in London was to abstract all registered wills in the Archdeaconry Court of Surrey, which he completed from 1484 to 1620, one register of which—"Herringman"—was printed by the Surrey Record Society. Another interesting work was the "Monumental Inscriptions of St. Anne's, Soho," a copy of which was graciously accepted by Her Majesty Queen Alexandra.

As the majority of his professional work comprised illuminated pedigrees, etc., he was enabled to spend long periods in the country, of which he took full advantage. During a stay at Winchester he copied all the inscriptions in the Cathedral, made drawings of the arms and copious notes from wills and other documents, etc., with a view to publication, but unfortunately owing to lack of subscribers this was never done; he has, however, left the manuscript ready for the press, and it is to be hoped it will one day be printed. On another occasion he visited Bath, and copied the Abbey Registers, which were printed by the Harleian Society.

In 1910 he was commissioned by the Library Committee of the City of London to copy the Monumental Inscriptions in all the City Churches, including St. Paul's Cathedral; this was in every sense his "monumental" work, forming as it does over 1,300 large folio pages of MS., with paintings of all arms, and multitudinous notes from wills and other records relating to the persons commemorated. This work was only finished about eighteen months ago, and had it not been for the fact that Mrs. Jewers undertook the whole of the writing of the MS., leaving him free to complete the painting and carry out the necessary researches for biographical data, it is doubtful whether it would ever have been completed.

Mr. Jewers always kept notes of any arms he saw, and could never resist making a rough drawing of any shield he saw—even on the doors of carriages—blissfully oblivious of appearances; however, in this manner he collected a mass of material, which he always hoped would be published as a "General Armory." As it is, he published a most useful work of Grants of Arms, compiled from MSS. in the British Museum, which is very scarce, as only about a dozen copies exist in book form, one of which was given by him to the writer and remains one of his most treasured possessions.

"Misc. Gen. et Her.," "The Genealogist," "British Archivist," "Notes and Queries," and other publications bear witness to the valuable work contributed to antiquarian literature by Mr. Jewers, and whilst living in the West Country he was a regular supporter of the "Western Antiquary," vol. x. of which was dedicated to him, and contains an excellent portrait of him.

A man of gentle and cheerful disposition, though very determined; ever willing to help those who had not his knowledge, he endeared himself to all who knew him, and his loss will be deeply felt by his many friends. His great fear was that he would be unable to finish the "London Monumental Inscriptions," but despite the state of his health during recent years, his will, combined with the most careful nursing on the part of his wife, enabled him to complete this great task, which in itself is sufficient to make his name honoured by all lovers of history.

The accompanying plate shews Mr. Jewers at work on an illuminated roll pedigree which he compiled for the Right Hon. Lord Halifax, and now hangs in the Hall at Hickleton.

Rogerson Family.

Some years ago I purchased on a second-hand bookstall a bible printed in Edinburgh by James Watson, MDCCXXII. The Apocrypha is included. On the back of the title page of the New Testament appears the record of the Rogerson family, which I have copied and enclose. The entry of William's death has been entered against Richard and struck out. Margaret appears to have had the measles at a later date, as the words "an also Margaret" are inserted above the line.

W. Rogerson appears to be a signature repeated after a lapse of years, former seems more vigorous, and the "r" is written differently.

William Curtis, F.L.S.

EMINENT BOTANIST.

A Biography compiled by Henry Curtis, F.R.C.S.,* from various sources, including Wm. Curtis's own Memoirs quoted in the "Gentleman's Magazine" for 1799, the "Sketch of his Life," etc., by his friend, Dr. R. J. Thornton, appearing in Curtis's "Lectures on Botany" (1805 Edn.), "A History of Alton, co. Hants," by William Curtis, M.R.C.S., of Alton, the will of William Curtis, F.L.S., which is here given verbatim, and family information.

The great-grandfather of the subject of this memoir, Thomas Curtis, physician and maltster, was born 1660 and lived at Horsham, Sussex, but after 1687 at Wallingford, Berks. He joined the early Quakers before 1689, and married, 5 Oct. 1687, Elizabeth Cowdry or Cowdray of the parish of Millbrooke, co. Southampton, she being probably daughter of Thomas Cowdry, who, with Roger Curtis and twenty other Friends, was committed to Southampton gaol in 1660-61-62, etc. This interesting note, derived from living descendants, makes it probable, in the opinion of the present compiler, that there was kinship, by collateral descent, with the ancestors of Admiral Sir Roger Curtis, G.C.B.

In his will, dated 12 Aug. 1706, proved 3 Sept. 1707 at Oxford, Thomas Curtis is described as of Wallingford, Berks, "Professor of Physick," a term he also applies to his brother-in-law John Cowdery of Millbrooke, co. Southampton, and his "unckle" John Mathews of Cheevely, co. Berks, to whom, with others, he devises, in trust for his wife Elizabeth and his six children, his messuage and malthouse in Wallingford.

William Curtis, F.L.S., eminent botanist, author of Flora Londinensis (published 1777—1798), and Founder of the Botanical Magazine, first issued in 1787, was the grandson of John Curtis, surgeon-apothecary, residing on Normandy Hill, Alton, co. Hants, his house being next door to the "Crown," where lived the now famous ostler, Thomas Legg, who was devoted to the study of Natural History, especially Botany, and could name every plant and insect in the locality. When William Curtis became apprenticed to his grandfather, his close friendship with Legg, whom he accompanied in his Natural History rambles, laid the foundation of his future career. "Dr. John Curtis was in much practice and reputation especially among his own sect, the Quakers." John Curtis's son, also John, was a tanner. He had four sons and two daughters, the eldest being William, the famous botanist, the second Thomas, who published his brother William's works.

The third son was John, a surgeon of repute, who resided at Cowley, near Uxbridge, co. Middlesex (will proved 1 Aug. 1829, his wife being Lydia Davis, who died in 1803), and was father of (i.) John Harrison Curtis, aurist to His Majesty King George IV., and founder, in 1816, of the Royal Dispensary for Diseases of the Ear, now the Royal Ear Hospital, Soho; (ii.) George Curtis; and one daughter, Matilda Curtis. [Was this Dr. John Curtis related to John Curtis, surgeon, of Hillingdon, near Uxbridge, whose wife Jane Henrietta, late of St. George's, Hanover Square, died 1829, her will being proved 10 Aug. 1829?]

The fourth son was Richard, born 5 Oct. 1757, died young.

The fifth son was George Curtis, and there were three daughters, one of whom, the eldest, Sarah, born 11 Jan. 1748, married Joel Goring; Mary died unmarried; and Ann, born 28 July 1760, died young.

Returning to the eldest son, William, born at Alton in 1746. In 1760, at the age of 14, when his bent for Botany and Natural History was already pronounced, he was apprenticed to his grandfather, John Curtis, the apothecary. At the age of 20, in 1766, he came to London and studied at St. Thomas's Hospital. After qualifying, and some years' experience in practice, associated with Dr. Thos. Talwin, a Quaker long resident at 51 Gracechurch Street,* near the Monument, and by whom he was left the business, he devoted himself exclusively to the study of Botany. Possessing an extraordinary knowledge of Natural History, and especially of Entomology, he was the first Botanist of note in this country who applied Botany to the purposes of Agriculture. His original work on "British Grasses" was of great value to farmers, to whom he first introduced many grasses now in common use; and we are indebted to him for that useful vegetable, Sea-kale.

He was one of the original Fellows of the Linnean Society, to which he contributed two of his most complete entomological papers—one on the Silpha grisca and Curculio lapathi; and the other (published after his death) shewing that the Aphides are the sole cause of the Honeydew on plants. His translation, in 1772, of Linnæus's Fundamenta entomologiæ brought him to the notice and friendly intimacy of many of the first naturalists, and he was appointed Demonstrator of Botany to the Company of Apothecaries, a post he resigned after several years owing to increasing pressure of his professional duties. In conjunction with Thomas White, Esq., "brother of the Rev. Gilbert White, of Selborne, and of Mr. Benjamin White, father of the present (1799) eminent bookseller in Fleet Street," Mr. Curtis occupied a very small garden for the culture of British Plants, near the Grange Road, at the bottom of Bermondsey Street, Bermondsey, where he first conceived the design of his great work, the "Flora Londinensis." The Botanic Garden established at Grange Road, becoming too small, was soon transferred, in 1771, to Lambeth Marsh, near the Magdalen Hospital. "This was the only public Botanic Garden in England, and here was arranged in one place the largest collection of British plants ever brought together, and here he delivered public lectures on Botany," the edition of 1805, published after his death, in three vols., being beautifully illustrated.

In 1777 appeared the first volume of the "Flora Londinensis," the second not being issued complete until 1798. He studied and wrote a complete description of the Brown-Tailed Moth, in 1783, which had done much damage that year. He published in 1784 "A Catalogue of Plants in the London Botanic Garden" (at Lambeth Marsh), about 6,000 plants being described in this catalogue, provided for each subscriber to the garden and the first of its kind ever offered to the public. Several catalogues were printed subsequently. On 1 Feb. 1787 appeared the first number of the Botanical Magazine. In 1789 "the Botanic Garden was finally established on a more elaborate plan, and with seven acres devoted to Experimental Agriculture, at Queen's Elms, Brompton, near Knightsbridge, near which he resided for several years preceding his death, at a place called Pond Place by the side of Chelsea Common." (Lysons' "Environs of London," Suppl. 1811.)

His publishing business was managed by his brother Thomas, at No. 3 St. George's Crescent, St. George's Fields, Blackfriars Road.

"By means of his Botanic Garden, his lectures, and his various

* The exact number of the house, apparently not previously recorded, was determined by the trade card, probably used as a book-plate, here reproduced by kind permission of the British Museum. The site of the old apothecary's shop is now occupied on the ground floor by a Lyons' refreshment establishment. The compiler hopes that the London County Council may be induced to place a tablet on the exterior of this house, in memory of the worthy author of "Flora Londinensis."

publications he impressed on the public mind a taste for the Science of Botany, and, in a sense, may be regarded as the father of English Botany."

[The eminent botanist, Prof. G. S. Boulger, commenting on some of the foregoing statements, taken from the original accounts, remarks, in a private letter to the present compiler, that he doubts if Curtis's could be called the only public botanic garden in England, unless the Chelsea Garden and those at the two Universities are to be looked upon as private. He thinks also that the locality of the "Brompton" Garden was Queen's Elm, not far south of Gloucester Road Station, and, therefore, a considerable distance from Knightsbridge. He adds that, "considering the steady progress botanical science had made in England during two centuries preceding Curtis's birth, he hardly thinks the name 'father of English botany' can well in any sense be transferred to him from William Turner, Dean of Wells, temp. Elizabeth." The Dean, who was an M.D., was born about 1515; published a "Herbal," 1568; "Huntyng and Fynding of the Romish Fox," 1543; died 7 July 1568.—Haydn's "Index of Biography."]

His wife Mary is mentioned in his will. He speaks of Sarah Caustin, whom he had educated, as residing with him when he made his will, Jan. 1799. She appears to have been an adopted child, "the only daughter" to whom Samuel Curtis, florist (1779—1860), born at Walworth, Surrey, was married in 1801. Samuel Curtis, in consequence of this marriage, became proprietor of the Botanical Magazine.

In person, William Curtis was "rather short and thick built, his dress was always uncommonly neat, his face full and ruddy, bespeaking benevolence, and although it be doubted whether he died a Quaker, he was a sincere believer in Christianity, a faithful husband, an affectionate and tender father."

Two portraits exist of him, one as a young man, bust to right, oval, stipple, in Dr. R. J. Thornton's Sexual System of Linnæus, published in 1802, and engraved by W. Evans; the other, engraved by Sansom, a later portrait, half-length, to right, oval in rectangular frame, stipple, published by T. Curtis in 1800, and reproduced in the 1805 edition of Curtis's Lectures on Botany.

The Dict. Nat. Biog. states the cause of William Curtis's death, which occurred suddenly, to have been an organic affection of the heart and the vessels connected with it. He bore his affliction, of which symptoms had appeared for twelve months before death, with much resignation, and died regretted by a large circle of scientific friends.

He died 7 July 1799, aged about 53, and was buried 11 July in the Churchyard at Battersea, where on the gravestone are to be seen, in addition to the inscription, the following lines:—

> "While living herbs shall spring profusely wild
> Or gardens cherish all that's sweet and gay,
> So long thy works shall please, dear Nature's child,
> So long thy memory suffer no decay."

* Prof. Boulger informs me that William Salisbury succeeded Curtis in the Garden at Brompton. He had been gardener to John Symmons, F.R.S., at Paddington House, before he became partner with Curtis, and he later removed the Garden from Queen's Elm to Sloane Street, now Cadogan Gardens.

† He illustrated Curtis's Lectures on Botany, as well as other scientific works.

The Family of Milborne of Somerset and Monmouthshire.[1]

John Milborne (see ante, p. 63).

Married secondly Susan, the daughter of Thomas Clayton[2] of Alveston, co. Gloucester, Doctor and the King's Professor of Physic in the University of Oxford,[3] and relict of William Lucas, gent.[4] He is said to have married this lady about one year after death of Katherine, his first wife. Susan Milborne was buried in the parish church of Alveston, where a monument was placed to her memory, which is now much defaced :—

> "Here lyeth the body of Susan, daughter of Thomas Clayton, Doctor and The King's Professor of Physic in the University of Oxford, descended from an ancient family of Clayton Hall in Yorkshire."
> "She was second wife of John Milborn, esq., descended from a family seated at Milborn Port in Somersetshire."
> "She died the 19th day of July 1654."[3]

She is said to have survived her marriage about six years.

A commission was issued 20 July 1670, 22 Charles II.,[5] to administer interrogatories on the part of Clayton Milborne and the four younger children of John and Susan Milborne, all infants under age, by their guardians Sir Thomas Clayton, knt., and Richard Clayton, clerk. These depositions were taken at the house of Cicely Horsley at the sign of the Mermaid in Thornbury, co. Gloucester, on Monday, 10 Oct. 1670, 22 Charles II.

The deposition of Alice Veale, the wife of Nicholas Veale of Alveston, co. Gloucester, esq., stated that she had heard that about 14 years since several sums of money were paid by one Nicholls, a kinsman to one Lucas in the interrogatories named, to John Milborne, and further, that she had seen about that time several sums of money paid by the said Nicholls unto John Milborne, which was said to be part of Susan his then wife's portion, and further, that she believed that John Milborne had in plate and goods with Susan to the value of 100*li.*

Another witness Anthony Wisse of Thornbury, co. Gloucester, gent., deposed that to the best of his belief there was a debt of 500*li.* to Mistress Alice Cleyton and another to Mr. Shephard of 200*li.* contained and set down in the schedule annexed to the said articles, which had been drawn by him by the advice of John Milborne the father and William Milborne the son; further, the schedule in his, deponent's, handwriting is as follows: To Elizabeth Milborne and Thomas, John and Susan, sons and daughters of the said John, 200*li.* each, in all 800*li.* To Sir William Button of Tolnam, co. Wilts. To Ellen Syms, daughter of Mr. Henry Syms of Frampton Cotterell, co. Gloucester, 600*li.* To Mr. John Williamson alias Aylett of .... duc in co. Monmouth 630*li.* To .... of the city of Bristol, baker, 100*li.* To Thomas Mansel of Elverton in co.

Gloucester, yeoman, 200*li.* To Thomas Mansell, son of said Thomas Mansell, 80*li.* The deponent further refers to an indenture of lease which was exhibited to him, which he says was sealed and delivered by William Milborne, and that John Milborne did first seal another part of the said indenture, and he further believed that the said John Milborne soon after such lease was sealed did, by some other deed or indenture by way of grant and release of the reversion of all the same manors and lands in the said indenture mentioned, conveyed and settled the same to the said William Milborne his son.

This marriage appears to have been a very unhappy one for the children of John Milborne by Katherine his first wife, for Mary Kirwood, his daughter, in her deposition taken at Monmouth 19 April 1671, states that he was at great cost through having to keep his wife's mother Alice Clayton, also her brother Major William Clayton and his men and two of her poor kinswomen, besides which, soon after his marriage, Susan his wife persuaded him to remove from Wonastow and leave the same estate to the management of servants, and to rent an estate at a place called Allener, co. Wilts, at a very dear rent, and after living there a short time she caused him to remove to a place called Longley and there rent a house and lands at a great rent, and after residing there a short time he purchased an estate called Alleston alias Alveston, co. Gloucester, and went to live there and was at a great cost for removing, repairs, etc.

This estate the witness Mary Kirwood further deposed was purchased and settled on Susan his wife and the children he had by her, and that he lived there during the lifetime of the said Susan. She further stated in her deposition that she did not know what portion her father had with Susan his wife, but that on one occasion she told him that Susan's friends had reported that he had 1200*li.* with her, to which he answered that if he had it had cost him 1500*li.*

Alice Veale, a kinswoman of Susan and wife of Nicholas Veale, esq., of Alveston, in a deposition made 10 Oct. 1670, states "that said Susan was a prudent wife and carefull woman And that she did live rather beneath her degree and quality than above yt."[1]

Alice Veale resided with John Milborne and his wife Susan for about 4 years up to the death of Susan,[2] and is no doubt one of the poor kinswomen referred to by Mary Kirwood in her deposition of 10 Oct.

In Michaelmas term 1663 (? 1670),[3] Clayton Milborne, son and heir of the body of John Milborne and Susan his second wife, Elizabeth, Thomas, John and Susan Milborne, younger children of John and Susan, infants, by Sir Thomas and Richard Clayton, their guardians, and the said Sir Thomas and Richard Clayton and Thomas Shepheard, and Thomas and Richard Blanchard, executors of Alice Clayton, widow, deceased, plaintiffs, exhibited a Bill of Complaint against Henry, Charles and George Milborne and Dame Elizabeth Morgan,[4] widow, defendants. That John Milborne, deceased, the father of plaintiffs, being seized of divers manors in the counties of Monmouth, Somerset and elsewhere, by articles dated in February 1648, in consideration of his intended marriage with Susan his second wife, the infants' mother, agreed with the plaintiffs Sir Thomas Clayton and Richard Clayton to settle land of 160*li.* per ann. value upon the heir male of his body by Susan, which the said plaintiff Clayton Milborne is, and to pay to the plaintiffs Sir Thomas and Richard Clayton for the use of every other child he should have by the said Susan within six months after such child should attain the age of two years, to remain in their hands until their several ages of 21 years, but in case of his death the interest of the said several sums to go for the maintenance of the said children, and that the interest and title of a mortgage for years made to William Lucas, the former husband of the said Susan, was settled in trust for her the said Susan, and that the said John Milborne agreed with Sir Thomas Clayton that he should have the benefit of the mortgage and dispose thereof as the said Susan should appoint, and that plaintiffs' infants were the issue of that marriage. Clayton Milborne, eldest son and heir male, ought to have 160*li.* per annum settled in fee, and that the said John Milborne, the father, ought to have paid 200*li.* each for the benefit of the other plaintiffs on attaining the ages of two years and a half, and that John Milborne received 1530*li.* for the money due on the said mortgage and did not pay the same to Sir Thomas Clayton.

Said Susan declared that the said money should be divided among the plaintiffs, her four children, and that the said John Milborne, the father, entered into a bond of 1000*li.* for payment of 500*li.* and interest to testatrix Alice Clayton, and that the plaintiffs the said Blanchards, her executors, were entitled thereto, and that the said John Milborne entered into another bond of 400*li.* for the payment of 200*li.* with interest to the plaintiff Thomas Shepheard, which was casually lost, and the said John Milborne, having totally failed in payment and being minded to make provision for payment thereof and to settle all his manors, etc., upon William Milborne, his son and heir apparent, did by articles dated 6 Nov. 1654, and in consideration of settlement William Milborne agreed to grant an annuity of 350*li.* per ann. to his said father for life and pay all his debts mentioned in a schedule amounting to 5000*li.* at least, of which debts to plaintiffs were parcel.

Said John Milborne about Nov. 1654 conveyed manor and premises of the value of 1200*li.* per ann. to the said William and his heirs, who entered upon and enjoyed the same during his life, and said William Milborne and the said premises so to him conveyed became liable for the plaintiffs' debt with interest. And the said William being conscious thereof did, about July 1660, make his will in writing devising all his lands to the defendant Henry Milborne, his uncle, in trust for the payment of his just debts and to pay every brother and sister he had living, whereof the plaintiffs the infants were five, 40*li.* per ann. each for ever, etc., and devised the rest of his goods to the defendants Charles and George Milborne, his brothers, and made the said Henry Milborne his executor and died, and the defendants Henry, Charles and George Milborne had received the profits, etc., and that John Milborne, the plaintiffs' father, was since dead and that Lady Morgan was his executrix or administratrix, etc. That the defendants made several untrue pretensions to defeat the plaintiffs of what was due to them, and that Lady Morgan pretended that she had no assets of the said John Milborne, or, if she had, pretended that by the agreement between the said John Milborne and William Milborne the personal estate of the said John Milborne ought to be discharged, and further that Henry, Charles and George Milborne denied both the first and second articles before-mentioned or that they were in any sort executed or that William made any such will.

The defendants Henry, Charles and George Milborne by their several answers denied their knowledge of the articles in 1648 or of the receipt by John Milborne of 1540*li.* on the Lucas mortgage, or of the articles or conveyance therein and mentioned to be between John Milborne and William Milborne in 1654, and further that they knew nothing of the schedule of debts, but deposed that William Milborne was at the execution thereof under age and that the said John Milborne in November 1655 made another settlement of the premises in question in consideration of his marriage with his first wife and for his children by her, and that he made provision for the plaintiffs, his children by the said second marriage, by lands in Gloucestershire worth 4000*li.* in full satisfaction of the articles and left them to the care of the plaintiffs Sir Thomas Clayton and his brother, who received the profits thereof and had since sold the said land for about 4000*li.* which ought to have been applied to the use of the children of the second marriage, and confessed William Milborne's will to be in trust, etc. And that William Milborne's bequest of 40*li.* per ann. each was intended for only those of the whole blood, looking upon his father's second marriage as destruction to him and the children of the first marriage, and by his answer further set forth that defendant Charles Milborne, brother and heir, had entered into possession of the premises and had got all the writings and detained the same, whereby the defendant Henry Milborne was involved in many suits and had a trial at Bar in defence of the will, and that though it went for the will yet the said Charles Milborne threatened to try it again and set aside the will.

The defendant Stephens in his answer denied any assets of John Milborne.

Upon debate whereof and reading the said articles in 1648 and 1654 and several other deeds, the court thought not fit to give plaintiff Clayton Milborne any relief touching the 160*li.* per ann. by him claimed, or the said younger children plaintiffs any relief touching the said Lucas mortgage money, but declared both those demands might be very properly swallowed in the purchase of Alveston, and concurred that William Milborne did not intend the plaintiffs should have the 200*li.* each paid and have 40*li.* each more, the rather because the articles in 1654 appear defaced, and therefore as touching the 200*li.* each claimed by plaintiffs the younger children and the 40*li.* per ann. each to them, and the plaintiff Clayton Milborne's demand and the plaintiff Shepheard's debt, it is this present Easter term, that is to say, Tuesday, 30 May, 23 Charles II., 1671, ordered that the defendants the Milbornes do account for the rents, issues and profits of the said manor and premises which they or any of them have received before Sir Andrew Hackett, knt., one of the Masters of this Court, etc. The said Master to compute and cast up the principal money and interest due to the plaintiff Shepheard. Also the interest of the 200*li.* each for the said four younger children from the time the same ought to have been paid by the articles made in 1648 until the death of William Milborne. And this court declareth that the 40*li.* per ann. each to the said Clayton Milborne and the other plaintiffs the younger children ought to go in satisfaction of the said principal sum of 200*li.* each, and doth order that the said Master do compute the said several sums of 40*li.* per ann. each with interest from the death of William Milborne. And it is ordered and decreed that the said defendants do and shall, out of the rent and profits of the said premises, pay the said several sums that shall be reported due to the plaintiffs. And that the said manor and lands do stand charged therewith and with the growing payment of the said 40*li.* per ann. as the same shall become due till the same shall be paid.

This unfortunate family dispute again came before the court in November of the same year, viz.:—

On 9 Nov. 1671,[1] upon opening the case for the plaintiff, Sir Thomas Clayton, it was alleged that before the said cause was brought to hearing the said Thomas and Richard Blanchard died after they had proved the said bond for 500*li.*, and they being dead there was no provision for the said Alice Clayton's debt though the bond was proved as aforesaid, since which the plaintiff Sir Thomas Clayton had taken forth letters of administration of the goods of her estate, etc., and was entitled to have relief of the said 500*li.* and interest as the said plaintiffs Blanchard ought to have had and as the said Shepheard then had for his debt.

It was ordered this present term of St. Michael, viz., Monday, 20 Nov., 23 Charles II., 1671, that Sir Thomas Clayton the administrator be now let into the account, and it was decreed that the defendants do pay the said 500*li.* with interest to the said Sir Thomas Clayton, administrator, etc., of Alice Clayton's estate, out of the rents and profits of the said manor and premises and that the said manor and premises stand charged therewith and that the said Master do compute the said principal and interest.

This record sets forth that Lady Morgan died intestate before she could answer to Bill, and that the plaintiffs exhibited a new Bill against Richard Stephens, administrator of the goods, etc., of John Milborne, setting forth that Lady Morgan never answered, but was since dead.

The 20th of Feb. 1673-4[2] Henry Milborne, esq., and Charles and George Milborne, his nephews, presented a petition and appeal to the House of Lords complaining of a Decree in Chancery charging their estate for the support of the half-brothers and sisters of the petitioners Charles and George Milborne by colour of some general words in the will of William Milborne, brother of the whole-blood to the said petitioners. Petitioners' Bill of Review was dismissed for want of error in law. If not relieved the children of the whole-blood would be worse provided for than those of the half-blood. Prayed their Lordships to reverse the decree.

aged 16 years. Student of the Inner Temple.[1] Member of Parliament: returned for the Borough of Monmouth 10 May 1708,[2] 10 Oct. 1710[3] (including Usk and Newport), and 31 Aug. 1713.[4]

Legatee under the will and codicil of Henry Milborne 1692, who calls him his beloved kinsman.

Preserved in the Harleian MS., British Museum, No. 6120, is a collection of Blazon of Arms by Roger Kemys, also a list of Knights by Roger Kemys and Clayton Milborne and signed by both, with the date 1680.

He married Mary, only daughter of Francis Brown, gent., of Frampton Cotterell, son of Robert Brown by Anne, daughter of William Kemeys.[5] His wife brought a large estate, including the manors of Magnesfield and Wickwick in the parish of Frampton Cotterell, with a handsome residence.[6]

The west end of the .... aisle of the parish church of Frampton Cotterell belonged to the family and was called the Milborne aisle, and contained inscriptions on flat stones to the Milborne, Brown and Kemys families.

On achievements were also the following arms :—

1. Sable, a chevron between three mullets argent, for Brown; impaling, vert, on a chevron argent three pheons sable, for Kemys.

2. Brown quartering Kemys.

3. Argent, a cross moline sable, in the dexter chief point a mullet gules, for Milborne; on an escutcheon Brown quartering Kemys.[5]

The Rev. Henry Ayling, rector of Frampton Cotterell, 28 Sept. 1858, in reply to my enquiry respecting the before-mentioned inscriptions as referred to by Bigland, informed me that the old church had been pulled down about twenty months previous and since restored, and although the greatest possible care had been taken that all traceable inscriptions should be preserved, the name of Milborne had not appeared.

Mary Milborne died 13 Jan. 1707[7] and was buried in the Milborne aisle of Frampton Cotterell church. The following is a copy of the entry in the parish register :—

> "Mary, the wife of Clayton Mulbornd of Wirkwerk, Gent., was buried the 14 day of January 1707."

Clayton Milborne died 25 Jan. 1712 and was buried in the Milborne aisle of Frampton Cotterell church, aged 63 years.[7] The entry in the parish register is as follows: "Clayton Mulbornd, Gent., Buried 27 January 1712."

He had issue :—

To his wife his chambers in the Temple which he desired she should sell as soon as conveniently after his decease; also to her his ground rents in Arundel Buildings in the Strand, being leasehold for the remainder of the term; also to her all the rest and residue of his estate of what nature or kind soever, not doubting of her care and prudence that thereout she would provide for so many of her children as were not otherwise provided for by his will. He further desired that his son Clayton Milborne should have 10*li.* to buy him mourning. His wife sole executor. Will signed John Milborne and witnessed by Thomas Wylde, Thomas Stevens and Thomas Wheeler, and proved at London 14 June 1699 by Emma Milborne, relict and executrix.

Her will dated 16 Aug. 1703.[2] Described as of the parish of St. Giles-in-the-Fields in co. Middlesex. To be buried at Chelsea near her dear husband, deceased. To her loving brother Mr. William Bishop she gave 50*li.* per annum during his natural life payable quarterly. To her daughters Martha and Emma, subject to provisoes and conditions hereafter mentioned, she gave 2000*li.* each to be paid them at their several and respective ages of 21 years or days of marriage which should first happen, and in case either or both should happen to die before marriage or at the age of 21 years that their said portion or portions of her said eldest daughters or such of them as should die before marriage or age of 21 years should cease and not be paid, but should be for the benefit of her executor hereafter named. To each and every of her three younger daughters Susannah, Mary and Dorothy, subject also to the proviso and conditions hereafter mentioned, she gave 1000*li.* each to be paid them at the age of 21 years or day of marriage which should first happen, and in case any should happen to die before marriage or the age of 21 years then the portion or portions of such so dying before the age of 21 years or marriage should go and be divided equally amongst such of her said three younger daughters as should be living at the death of such of her said three younger daughters so dying before the age of 21 years or marriage; further, to each of her said five daughters she gave 50*li.* per annum payable quarterly clear of all deductions until she should attain 21 years of age or be married and no longer, and she charged the said several yearly sums of 50*li.* each on her personal estate. To her said daughters Martha and Emma she bequeathed 50*li.* at their respective days of marriage to buy them clothes. To her said daughters Martha and Emma she gave all her plate to be equally divided between them. To her five daughters and to her son John she gave 10*li.* each to buy them mourning. 22 years with interest to that time from the time of her decease at 5*li.* per cent. The said interest to be paid him quarterly free from taxes, or said son to have an annuity of 100*li.* for life at his election to be made when he should attain the age of 22 years. To the said son John Milborne she also gave the sum of 50*li.* per annum during his natural life clear of all deductions, the same she willed should be charged on her personal estate, and in case her said son John should elect and choose to have an annuity of 100*li.* per annum for life clear of all deductions rather than the 1000*li.* in money and an annuity of 50*li.* per annum for his life, then she gave and devised unto her said son John Milborne one annuity or yearly sum of 100*li.* per annum during his natural life payable quarterly, and charged her personal estate therewith and declared as follows: "I doe hereby declare that the said legacy of one thousand pounds soe given and devised to my said son John Milborne or the said Annuity of One Hundred Pounds at his election is in lieu and full recompence of the Lands and Tenements in the Isle of Ely given and devised to my said son John by my late Husband John Milborne, deceased, which he gave him by mistake, he not having a power so to doe, my said husband and myselfe being joint purchasers of those Lands and the same becoming my right by survivorship." To her said brother William Bishop and to all her children she recommended that they should live together and contribute towards housekeeping, but left it to their discretion. She desired that Martin ffolkes and Richard Milner should choose out of such securities for money as she should leave behind at her death such and so many of them as should be sufficient with an overpluss of 5000*li.* at the least to secure the payment to her said daughters of their respective portions of 7000*li.* The said legacy of 1000*li.* and the annuity of 150*li.* to her said son John, and the said annuity of 50*li.* to her brother William Bishop, and the several annuities of 50*li.* each to her five daughters and interest for the same respectively, and that her executors should immediately assign such securities to the said Martin ffolkes and Richard Milner or the survivor of them, etc. The 2000*li.* to each daughter Martha and Emma and the 1000*li.* to each daughter Susannah, Mary and Dorothy she gave on condition that they each and every of them did not marry without the consent of her very good friend Martin ffolkes, esquire, her said brother William Bishop, her executor and Mr. Richard Milner or two of them or the survivor of them, and in event of either marrying without such consent she gave the portion of such daughter to Martin ffolkes, her brother William Bishop, her executor, and Mr. Richard Milner in trust to be invested and the interest product of the same to be from time to time paid into the proper hands of such daughter or daughters so marrying without consent, so that such sum or sums should be secured for the benefit of such child or children of such daughter or daughters so marrying without consent. All residue of her estate not before given after payment of her debts, etc., and all her messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments whatsoever and wheresoever (subject to and charged notwithstanding with and made hereby liable to the payment of all and every the said annuities and legacies hereinbefore given and devised) she gave, devised and bequeathed to her son Clayton Milborne, his heirs and assigns for ever, who was appointed sole executor. Will signed Emma Milborne in the presence of Richard Milner, Rich.

Wilkinson, Jos. Seymore, Richard Bromfeild and Elizabeth Platt, and proved at London 3 Sept. 1703 by Clayton Milborne the son and sole executor.

IV. Elizabeth Milborne, first daughter.[1] Baptized May 1651.[2] Under the age of 21 years 5 Dec. 1670, being at that time under the guardianship of Sir Thomas Clayton, knt., and William Clayton, her uncles.[1]

This lady married John Tayler, gent., of the city of Bristol, to whom she was second wife.[3]

Mr. Tayler was a legatee under the will of Thomas Milborne, his brother-in-law, and was also executor with Elizabeth his wife of the same will, and as such proved the will 25 Oct. 1676.[4]

This gentleman, being seized in his lifetime of the fee simple of a new-built messuage and tenement then in his holding, situate in or near the old market in Red Cross Street in the parish of St. Philip and St. James in the city of Bristol, did by his Indentures of lease and release, dated 29 and 30 Oct. 1677, 29 Charles II., grant and convey the same to Clayton Milborne his brother-in-law and Rowland Thrupp, gent., of the city of Bristol, for the use of the said John Tayler for the term of his life and after his decease upon trust that they, the said Trustees, should grant and convey the said premises in such manner as he should direct by his last will and testament.

On 3 Jan. 1677, 29 Charles II., the said John Tayler, being indisposed in body but of sound mind, made his last will and testament and appointed Elizabeth his loving and well-beloved wife sole executrix and constituted his loving brother-in-law Clayton Milborne, gent., and his very good friend Rowland Thrupp, gent., overseers. By this will he gave to John Tayler his eldest son 30*li.* to be disposed of in placing him out apprentice as his overseers should think fit. To Eleanor Tayler, his daughter by his late deceased wife, 20*li.* to place her out apprentice "to some gentlewomen or shopkeeper of or in one of the Exchanges about or in London or anywhere else according to the discretion of" his overseers. To the care and love of his said wife he left the two children he had by her named Elizabeth Tayler and Milborne Tayler, and also left his said wife all the residue of his property, but if there was not sufficient to discharge his debts the trustees were empowered to sell the said property before mentioned at the request of his said executrix and hand over to her any balance remaining. To his sister Ann Jenkyns, widow, he bequeathed 5*li.*, and to each of his overseers a broad piece of gold of 25*s.* value each piece.

This will was signed in the presence of Susanna Milborne, Robert Machin and Alice Veele.

John Tayler shortly after making his will died, and Elizabeth his wife and sole executrix, finding the personal estate not sufficient to meet the liabilities, refused to pay the legacies or to prove the will, and the trustees, being pressed by the creditors by indentures of lease and release bearing date respectively 24 and 25 Jan. 1681, 32 Charles II., sold the premises to Thomas Williams, merchant of the city of Bristol [since deceased], for the sum of 450*li.*, and the said Thomas Williams resold the same to the said Clayton Milborne by indenture of lease and release, dated respectively 26 and 27 of the same month, for a like sum of 450*li.*

John Tayler, the son and heir [described as a mariner of the city of Bristol], appears to have laid claim to the said premises, believing his father did not execute the trust under which the property was sold, in consequence of which Clayton Milborne, under date 24 Oct. 1687, filed a Bill in Chancery against him to compel him to come into court and give evidence of his claim and abide by the decision of the same.

The defendant filed his answer 26 April 1688, in which he stated that he was not aware his father made a lease and release of the property or that he made a will, and prayed to be dismissed with his reasonable costs and charges.[1]

V. Susan Milborne, second daughter. Baptized July 1654. Under the age of 21 years 5 Dec. 1670, and then under the guardianship of Sir Thomas Clayton, knt., and William Clayton, her uncles.

As Thomas Milborne, her brother, omitted to name her in his will, 28 Sept. 1676, but mentioned the names of his brothers Clayton and John Milborne, also his sister Elizabeth, wife of John Tayler, it is probable that she predeceased him.

John Milborne married thirdly Anne, dau. of Sir Charles Morgan of Pencarn, co. Monmouth, knt., and widow of Sir Lewis Morgan of Ruperra, knt. There was no issue by this marriage, and she married thirdly Walter Strickland, one of Cromwell's Upper House. She was dead before 26 Oct. 1669.[4]

He died Aug. 1661 and was buried the 10th of the same month in the parish church of Monmouth.[5] Will, dated 21 July 1661,[6] sets forth a particular of what was due to him from his estate, which he had settled in Nov. 1654 upon William Milborne his "then" eldest son, with the exception of two farms called Baily Pitt and Kirton and some other small things, in consideration that the said William should pay him yearly during his, testator's, life 350*li.* and 500*li.* as by a deed of rent charge and certain articles between his said son and himself then in the Azure, a cross or, in the first quarter a rose barbed and seeded proper. CREST.—On a crest coronet a peacock proper.

On the dexter side of the escutcheon is a female figure, used as a quasi-supporter, holding a spear in her right hand; the helm on her head crested with a serpent. And on the left, raised erect against the shield, is a lion. The whole is placed on a rectangular slab.

An interesting specimen of the Chippendale type of bookplate, and of unusually small size.

Seal gone.

The first of the family of Stepney to come into Wales was Alban (to whom the arms are granted). He was younger son of Thomas Stepney of Aldenham, co. Hertford, and, obtaining the post of registrar of the diocese of St. David's, married Mary, daughter and coheir of William Philipps of Picton Castle, co. Pembroke. His son John was created a baronet 24 Nov. 1621, which honour lapsed on the death of Sir Thomas Stepney, 8th Baronet, s.p., in 1825.

Justina Maria, sister of the 8th and last Baronet, married Colonel Andrew Cowell of the Coldstream Guards, by whom she had issue John, who assumed the additional surname of Stepney. This John was, in 1871, created a baronet as Sir John Cowell-Stepney of Llanelly, co. Carmarthen. With the death of his son Sir Arthur, 2nd Baronet, in 1909, this baronetcy also expired.

Bridgen.

In the dexter corner of a portrait in the possession of my family—perhaps of little artistic merit—is the following inscription: "Edward Bridgen, Esq^r, F R.S. | & S.A. Died July 28, 1787." According to "The Gentleman's Magazine," he, as of Paternoster Row, merchant, was married, 24 April 1762, to Miss Richardson of Parson's Green. In the same magazine of July 1787 we read under July 28: "In Lovel's Court, Paternoster Row, Edw^d Bridgen, Esq., F.R.S., Treasurer of the Society of Antiquaries, a respectable Merchant, son-in-law to the famous Richardson, and a valuable contributor to our Miscellany, where we hope to record some further memorials of him." In the number of the following September we find, "Lines occasioned by the death of Edward Bridgen, Esq.":—

Still tho' ascending to its kindred skies
With virtuous haste the soul of Bridgen flies;
And conscious of the paths he purely trod,
Seeks in glad hope the bosom of his God.
What friend resigned can view the funeral bier,
Or hail the Spirit blest without a tear,
And freely let it flow, for heaven will prize
The good man's grief when his associate dies,
Assured that those its precepts must have kept,
For whom a Jebb would sigh, and Hollis wept.

He was elected F.S.A. 28 April 1768, Member of the Society of Arts and Commerce, and as of Lovell's Court, merchant. I have heard that he was a stationer, and was buried in the chapel of St. Faith in St. Paul's Cathedral, the burial place of the Stationers' Company, and acted frequently as amanuensis to Richardson, whose daughter Martha he married. Where can I learn more about him?

Niece Howlatson and her sister Elizabeth 3 guineas each. Jane and Elizabeth Lindsley my cousins 2 guineas each and give them their first note of hand of 10 guineas, but not the second borrowed, we having been very kind to them, kinder than their brother or anybody else. Mrs. Langley, my wife's sister, for her life 6 guineas a year, I have long paid her, if her brother and nephews who are of ability choose not to take this payment on themselves. Each of the following a ring worth 1 guinea: Mrs. Mary Wright, Mr. James ‡ 1761, July 18. Appeared personally Sir Francis Gosling, Knt. and Alderman of London, and deposed that on 6 July, six days after the death of Samuel, he went to his dwelling in Salisbury Court, Fleet Street, and there found the will, etc., which was dated 13 Nov. 1727 but endorsed 13 Nov. 1757, and thinks 1727 a mistake, as the witnesses were not born in 1727, Catherine Lintot now not being 25 years old, Henry Campbell 22, and Benj. To all of them occasionally my most grateful and most respectful thanks for their favour to me and wishes for a happy meeting in a better world. Had I bequeathed a ring to each of the ladies I was honoured by as correspondents and truly venerate for their virtues and amiable qualities, the list of their names would even in this solemn act have subjected me to the charge of ostentation.

Mrs. Smith, as a small token of my value for her late husband and of her own services, £5 and 3 guineas for mourning; the other maidservants 3 guineas; each journeyman working with me at my decease half-a-guinea; Arthur Rutherford, if still in my service, £5. The remainder of my estate whatsoever to be divided into three equal parts: Elizabeth my wife one part; each of my daughters Martha, Anne and Sarah out of the remaining two parts, if they shall so far extend, a portion equal to what I gave my daughter Mary on her marriage with Mr. Ditcher. If any remains after such payments it is to be equally divided among my four daughters. Francis Gosling, Esq., and my bro.-in-law Mr. Allington Wilde, and Mr. Andrew Millar, bookseller, and their heirs, in trust, all my lands and tenements in Dagenham, co. Essex, to sell the same to carry out my bequests. Ex'ors wife Elizabeth, brother Allington Wilde, Francis Gosling and Andrew Millar.

My said trustees £20 each. My business to be carried on in my wife's name under the direction of my ex'ors for benefit of her and my unmarried daughters. I presume my wife will not keep on the house in Parson's Green after my decease. I particularly commend my third daughter Anne to her mother's care in the distribution of her third, being delicate of frame and constitution.

1760, April. If it should happen by the decease of any of my three daughters unmarried any room for kindness to my relations should fall into the power of my relict or daughters at their respective demises, let me recommend to it the two daughters of my brother William (the son has shewn such a strong disposition to take care of himself that he wants not the recommendation, and I hope never will), also the not happy daughters of my late brother Benjamin Subey most particularly, whom my wife has in a manner adopted and who has been always dutiful to her and obliging to all her cousins.

As I said above, I mean that son well and wish him success, but the letters that have passed between him and me still manifest that he will have success if it can be obtained, and I doubt not that after my death my family will be made as sensible as I am sorry for his sake to say I have been on every occasion that has offered. If any difficulties attend him they must arise from his unprecedented rashness in two steps of his life. God amend his heart, and I give him to overcome them and their natural and almost unavoidable consequences. I mean this only for caution and warning to my family with regard to this partial and selfish young man, that he may not at the expense and to its great detriment get from it the means he will undoubtedly get if he can to repair the exceeding rash steps he has taken.

1760, July 5. I have entered into a partnership with Miss Catherine Lintot, to commence 24 June 1760, and have removed the printing house belonging to her in the Savoy to my own printing house in White Lyon Court, Fleet Street.

I request Mr. James Bailey of St. John's Square, Clerkenwell, who has been intrusted with the management of this affair, to be a co-ex'or to my will, and to him £20.

The Family of Milborne of Somerset and Monmouthshire.[1]

I. George Milborne, esq., of Wonastow, co. Monmouth, afterwards of the Priory of Abergavenny, son of Charles Milborne and Sarah Bonett his wife (see ante, p. 93). He matriculated at New College, Oxford, 22 June 1716, aged 17, and described as son of Charles Milborne, esq., of Hackney, co. Middlesex. A barrister of the Middle Temple, 1724.[2] Legatee under the will of his grandfather George Bonett, 1702.[3] Administered his father's estate. Letters of administration granted to him 12 June 1729.[4]

Coxe, in his "Tour of Monmouthshire," p. 230, mentions a portrait of him as existing at Wonastow House.

He married Mary, sole daughter and heiress of James Gunter,[5] esq., of the Priory, Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, M.P. for Monmouth. He died suddenly in 1711. At the Dissolution in 1546 all the possessions of the Priory of Abergavenny, amounting to 80*li.* per annum, were granted to James Gunter, co. Brecon, and continued in his family until this marriage, when the estate passed into the Milborne family.[6]

George Milborne died 20—23 Jan. 1758.[7] Will dated 15 July 1737[8]: "Red Lyon Square. I am well and in sound and perfect memory but least disputes may hereafter arise I do hereby give all my personal estate to my dear wife Mary Milborne. Witness my hand. Geo. Milborne."

On 21 Feb. 1758 Benet Garrard, esq., of Luggershall, co. Wilts, and Letitia Sarah Maria Milborne of the parish of St. Martin-in-the-fields, co. Middlesex, spinster, deposed on oath that she believed the will to be in the handwriting of the said George Milborne, described as late of the parish of St. Martin-in-the-fields. And the same day (viz., 21 Feb. 1758), administration with will annexed of all and singular the goods, chattels and credits of the said George Milborne was granted to Mary Milborne, widow and relict and universal legatee.

She sued for and obtained a Common Recovery of her estates in Monmouthshire and Herefordshire in Hilary Term, 4 Geo. III., 1764.[9] This suit was conducted by Forth Winter, gent., demandant against Henry Mountfort, gent. The estates set forth as being situate in Monmouthshire were the Manor of Llanellen and Monkestown, otherwise Monk Street, with appurtenances and 90 acres, 4 water corn grist mills, 2 dove-houses, 160 gardens, 1000 acres of land, 200 acres of meadow, 200 acres of pasture, 200 acres of wood, 2000 acres of furze, heath and common pasture for all cattle, with the appurtenances, in the parishes of Llanellen,

To her servant Ann Lewis, if she lived with her at the time of her decease, she bequeathed all her wearing-apparel and household linen. To the person who should be vicar of the parish of Abergavenny at the time of her decease she bequeathed 20*li.* in trust to distribute the same amongst the poor inhabitants of the parish who did not receive weekly pay from the parish. She also desired to be "buried in a Leaden Coffin" in the same grave where her deceased husband lies. of the baptisms of the children of Charles Milborne, esq., and Lady Martha commenced in the Register of Mary-le-bon Church in 1772.

In 1763 he sued for a Common Recovery of his Herefordshire lands. The indenture, which bears date 5 Feb. 3 Geo. III., 1763,[1] is between Charles Milborne, esq., of Wonastow, co. Monmouth, of the first part, Joseph Eyre, gent., of Christ's Hospital, London, of the second part, and Thomas Aylmer, gent., of the Middle Temple, London, of the third part, the intent of deed being that Joseph Eyre might become a perfect tenant of the freehold of the several manors and lordships, etc., to the end that one or more good and perfect common recoveries might be had thereof to the use, intent and purpose hereafter mentioned, and to remain to the use of the said Charles Milborne.

This indenture Charles Milborne acknowledged in Court 5 Feb. 1763, and it was enrolled on the Close Roll the same day.

In Hilary Term the same year he obtained a Common Recovery, viz., Thomas Aylmer, gent., against Joseph Eyre, gent., the lands specified being in the county of Hereford and consisting of 12 messuages, 16 gardens, 400 acres of land, 200 acres of meadow, 130 acres of pasture, 100 acres of wood, 500 acres of furze and heath and common of pasture for all cattle, with the appurtenances in the parishes of St. Wainard's, Llanrothall, and Garway, the said Charles Milborne being voucher.[2]

Pedigree of Moyle of Kent, from Bodmin, Cornwall.

Communicated by A. Stephens Dyer, Esq.

This pedigree is an attempt to connect the various branches of the Kentish Moyles, and to rectify the error made in the descent of the Moyles of Bucknell and Caversfield. The will of Thomas Moyle of Staple Inn and Leeds, Kent (1592), who married the heiress of Richard Langston, and the various Chancery Suits amply prove the descent as here shewn.

Mr. Urban, Oct. 4. The following inscriptions are omitted by Messrs. Lysons :—

At West Twyford, near Ealing, Middlesex, on a flat stone in the chancel : "Epit. Arthuri Moyle, fil. Gwalteri Moyle arm : qui obiit 1 Janu. Ann. 1681.

His friends' delight, the glory and the pride
Of masculine worth, dislik'd this world, and dy'd.
Behaviour, courage, all this world could boast
Or age bring forth, with Arthur Moyle is lost.
Whose name requires no glosse to set it off,
Brother and son of Walter, that's enough."

At the west end of the nave, on a flat stone : "Here lie buried the bodies of Walter Moyle, Esq., and his two little sonnes, Robert and Francis 1660."

According to Mrs. Basil Holmes' interesting little book this stone is now in the churchyard, and the inscription (1908) still readable.

Births, Marriages and Deaths gleaned from the War Office Records.

Public Record Office, W.O., 54/859, 54/935, 54/927, 54/929.
Miscellaneous Papers.

These bundles contain letters written by parents, guardians, etc., of boys whom they were desirous of nominating for a Cadetship to the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, and are dated between 1822—1848.

Although a good many of the certificates of baptism, which were sent in to the Master-General of the Ordnance, are still extant, the majority of the subjoined births or baptisms and parentages have been gleaned direct from the aforesaid letters, with any additional matter of biographical interest.

The rules then in force relating to nomination of boys to Woolwich were in the hands of the Master-General, who had two lists, viz., the official list and his own private one. On a change of the government the outgoing Master-General would hand the official list (containing perhaps 150 names) to his successor, who probably added a long list of his own. This change often resulted in the parents being notified, when their sons were ready to go up for examination, that their names were not in the new Master-General's list. This caused great disappointment to parents and boys alike, and entailed unnecessary expense and hardship, especially as the boys had been kept at expensive schools for two or three years awaiting their examination. These records are at the Public Record Office, together with the records of the Admiralty and those of the Home, Foreign, and Colonial Offices.

Henry Hilton, "the Melancholy Baron" of Hilton Castle, Durham, often visited Nathaniel Hilton of Billingshurst, and lived and died at Michelgrove in Clapham, Sussex.

Anthony Hilton, whose will is given above, belongs somewhere to the Hilton pedigree in "Surtees," vol. iv, and Berry's "Sussex Genealogies," query where. "Surtees" gives the father of Nathaniel as Henry Hilton.

I should be glad to know if the Nathaniel Hilton who settled in Jamaica, and was married to Anne Turner 3 July 1673, was of this family, and also if the Anthony Hilton who resided in Virginia was a descendant of the Hiltons of Billingshurst.

FETTIPLACE AND ALLEN.

Bill (10 June 1675) by Edmund Fetiplace, citizen and mercer of London, and Elizabeth his wife, v. George Read and Richard Allen.

John Allen, citizen and merchant tailor of London, late husband of the complainant Elizabeth, died about March 1672[-3], leaving three small children by the said Elizabeth all under the age of 9, viz.: John, Mary and Abigall. His widow took out letters of administration in the P.C.C. In May or June last there was a treaty of marriage between the complainants, and one George Read of the parish of St. Clement Danes did officiously appear in behalf of the said Elizabeth, undertaking to treat with the said Edmund and his friends concerning the marriage. On the morning the marriage was solemnized, Read, Richard Allen and Philip Keene, both citizens and woollen drapers of London, and a scrivener came to the said Elizabeth's house, saying the said Edmund had lately been with them, and they produced a bond for payment of £600 ready for her signature, asserting it was for the protection of the three children. Now the said Read and Allen threaten to prosecute Fettiplace for immediate payment of the £600, knowing that he is but a young man and newly set up in his trade of a mercer. This they do in breach of the trust reposed in them.

The first answer of Read and Allen states that the marriage of the complainants took place on or about 11 June 1674. They are ready to deliver up the bond on the said Edmund's giving security to pay the children's portions. (Chancery Proceedings before 1714, Bridges, 480/94.)

The complainant's father Richard Longe, who died very young, made his wife Marian and the complainant his executors. Marian afterwards married one Robert Geale, who died leaving the same executors, and Marian married again one Oliver Pleydell, gent., now likewise deceased. The complainant is informed that before this last marriage the said Oliver gave a bond to deliver to the complainant, on his coming of age, a lease for many years to come, purchased by his father, and one half of all his father's goods. On the complainant's coming of age the said Oliver removed from his house of Lyneham, taking all the chests containing the wills, evidences, etc. Shortly after Marian died. Oliver afterwards took to wife Margaret, widow of William Wye of Kemble, co. Wilts.
